Guide to: The Talent Show and Elections is the eighth episode of Ned's Declassified School Survival Guide. The contents of Show Plot Part 1: The Talent Show's annual talent show is coming up and, as usual, Mr. Wright only allows for classic acts such as cello concerts and tap dancing. He won't let Martin play his cello on hip-hop music, Coconut Head doing a routine in a bubble wrap suit, or Lisa belching the alphabet. Therefore, Ned decides to create his own talent show Talent-Paluz that will allow each student to shine. The only problem is that it will happen at the same time as the official school talent show, which should be attended by all students. Ned convinces Mr. Monroe to keep Talent-Paluz in his class. He also wants Moze in the headline, but she doesn't have the cool talent and doesn't want to use the dance like she did for Mr. Wright's talent show last year. Mr. Chopsow tells Mose that she can work with her magic with a tree. The next day, no one comes to Talent Paluza. Ned tells Cookie to find everyone on the talent show and convince them to come there. Talent-Paluz is a big hit. However, Mr. Wright catches Cookie and realizes that the gym is empty. He finds everyone in Talent-Palooza and sees how everyone enjoys it so much. He asks Ned to help him choose talent for next year's show and Lisa burp in Mr. Wright's face. Claire and Backpack Boy on Talent Palooza Tips No. 244 - If you don't like something, don't complain. Change it. Tip 256 - Everyone has talent. Tip 256.1 - Express yourself and have fun. Tip 257 - Find your talent and go for it. Part 2: Election Huge Team enters Ned as a presidential candidate in school elections. At first, Ned is against running, believing that this is nothing more than a popularity contest. He's up against Susie, who won last year by dispersing Vote Leave pencils and candy bars, and then using a car wash to raise funds for light neon wolves. Cookie analyzes the results and says that Ned tied for third place with Weasel (who always gets nominated as a joke). Ned tries to disqualify himself by desecrating school property and spraying the locker with paint of the same color as the locker. But everyone thinks he's cleaning the lockers and encouraging him instead. He throws basketball at Coach Diergue during a dodgeball, but she just likes that he makes an effort in the gym class. He then tries to start fighting food, but people think he's just found a new fun way of recycling. Cookie analysis of the results says Ned is currently in second place. Ned still believes it's a popularity contest, but Moze points to one person who won a class president who wasn't popular: Mr. Chopsaw. He tells Eda that the presidential election about finding the best person for the job, and convinces Ned to run for real. He finally says he will work and uses the idea to get students on the street after they finish their However, Susie has launched a smear campaign against Ned and gives free T-shirts to those who promise to vote for her. Cookie tabulates his voice again and says it's a four-day tie, with one student undecided: Coconut Head. All the candidates find Coconut Head to convince them to vote for him, but they all end up hurting him in some way (with a huge crew beating him on behalf of Ned). When the results are announced, Lisa will be named treasurer, Martin Tsverley will be elected vice president, and Weasel will be elected president. Although Ned lost the weasel, Martin went with Ned's plan for the students to go outside after they finished their lunch. Tips Tip No. 141 - Go BIG with campaign posters. Tip 141.1 - Hand out leaflets with your ideas. Tip 815.3.7B - Keep your speeches short and simple. Tip No.815.4.7C - Running for an office class can really make a difference.
