As part of its big 48-hour sale, Macy's is discounting select home items through November 3. To our absolute delight, these goodies happen to include TON first-class kitchen appliance cuisinart. So if you're looking to upgrade your kitchen or finally get that pricey food processor you were hesitant to buy, now is the time to go wa-a. You can get quite significant savings on many of these items, and you only have 48 hours to do so. And I mean, who doesn't like the thrill of hooking a killer deal in such a short window time? You're on top of that. Go, go! Below are some of our favorite Cuisinart steals, but believe us when we say there are many more where they came from. Cuisinart TOA-60 Air Fryer Toaster Oven - $169.99 Image: cuisinart We're sure you won't feel bad about replacing the current toaster with this multifunctional gem that works as a convection, conventional and air-hot oven all in one. It has seven features: hot air, convection bake, broil convection, bake, fry, warm and toast- you yes, you can cook in just about any style you want with this thing. It packs 1800 w power, has a 60-minute timer, automatic shutdown function, and even a toast shadow selector (for those of us who still don't know what time to set for our preferred shade.) it's sleek and made of stainless steel, and it's also super easy to clean with a non-stick interior. Usually priced at $249.99, you can get it for $169.99 through Saturday. (Additional 15% will be added at checkout) Cuisinart DLC-8SBXY Kitchen Processor - $89.99 Image: cuisinart If you're ready to take your cooking game up a notch, you'll need this amazing multi-tasting processor. Its 11-cup work bowl and very large feed tube will allow you to dominate large batches of whole fruits and vegetables. It includes a fine slicing of a stainless steel disc, one medium slicing disc, a stainless steel shredding disc, one blade for chopping, mixing and kneading the dough (yes, it's powerful enough to tackle the dough with ease), a spatula, and an instruction/recipe book. Usually $162.99, it sells for as little as $89.99. Cuisinart SS-15 Combo Coffee Maker - $169.99 Image: Cuisinart Whether you're brewing for a group of companies or just a quick cup for yourself, Cuisinart SS-15 Combo Coffee Maker has you covered. It has a fully automatic 12-cup coffee maker on one side and one brewer's serve. It has 24-hour programmability, so you can wake up to a fresh pot of beer for the household in the morning, or your solo cup is ready for when you're about to run out the door. It has an adjustable automatic-off function, Cup-sized options, cook control and cook pause (when you just can't wait for the whole brew to be done before snagging the cup.) Its carafe is adjustable to temperature, and the solo side also includes a removable drip tray to accommodate the travel mugs. Plus Plus The K-cup is compatible, so you don't need to give up your favorite coffee shop pods. Usually $249.99, you can get it for $169.99. (Additional 15% will be used at checkout.) Cuisinart CPC-600 Stainless Steel Pressure Plate - $76.49 Image: cuisinart This Cuisinart pressure cooker is one stylish time saver. The stainless steel plate has a 99-minute timer, digital thermostat and LED display. It also has the touch of a control button for low and high pressure, browning, simmering, frying, and keep-warm options, so your dish will always be cooked as you like it. Its non-stick cooking pot dishwasher is safe and it comes with a cool touch of side handles. Usually listed at $124.99, you can catch it for $76.49 when checking out. You can check out the full list of cuisinart appliances for sale through Saturday here, and make sure to also check out all the other small appliances that are included in the 48-hour sale. Rosalie Port St. Lucie, FL Verified Reviewer Original Review: July 30, 2020This coffee maker has a meat grinder for coffee beans as well as a timer so I can have freshly brewed coffee made from whole beans anytime I like. It can be installed for any 4 to 12 cups. It has an automatic shutdown that is great for people like me who leave the house and then wonder, did I turn off the coffee pot? I'd rather be a little hotter and a little stronger for a full pot. Half the pot can be stronger by simply adding extra beans. It can also be used with ground coffee so for those who don't want to keep beans or a favorite brand that doesn't offer beans, so it's really very versatile in the moderate price range. Nothappy Desoto, TX Verified Reviewer Original Review: July 27, 2020This review for 12C and single cup manufacturer. I like the fact that if I only want one cup I can get it or on the days when I'll be home, I can boil the pot and bring the isolated carafe with me. Another useful aspect is that on those mornings where I really need help getting going, I can drink the whole pot (ready when I'm getting up, of course) and then one to go cup as I out the door. Louis Warren, MA Verified Reviewer Original Review: July 19, 2020The Cuisinart DCC-1200 was a large auto drip coffee maker that worked super for $60-70. It comes with many features with a basic small clock at the front with a clock and minute buttons right under the clock. Has a carafe tempo handle with a The 2nd pen turns on and off automatic beer, watch, brew and prog selection. It also has 1-4 button cups. This is the second time I've bought the same coffee maker, for the price. You'll be very happy. Watch the video on this coffee maker, many, many people like this model and its brew as well. Be blessed. Penny Greencastle, PA Verified Reviewer Original Review: February 23, 2020I has several Cuisinart pans along with other brands. The quality of cuisinart is amazing. It has held back everything I have cooked in them for 10 years and still looks as new as the day I bought them. They are by far the best brand of utensils. Although a little higher in price, but very well worth every penny you pay for them because they are so durable and strong. They show no signs of wear at all, even after all this time. There is a very easy to clear and I would recommend them to everyone. Well, it's worth it. Jim Philadelphia, PA Verified Reviewer Original Review: February 20, 2020I bought Cuisinart utensils as I got tired of cheaper brands without delaying the long run. The set I have is dressed so the food is good cook and cleaning is done in a wrong time flat. The only downside is the lids don't fit every pot. Cooking should be done over medium heat. High heat will destroy the finish line. Overall, I am quite happy with my Cuisinart dishes. It has held very well and continues to offer exceptional cooking options to the size of the pot. JOHN Grand Prairie, TX Verified Reviewer Original Review: October 2, 2020I purchased several parts of Cuisinart as a gift for my daughter, however I bought 1.8 or 9 top-line frying pan for $50.00, for myself, since at my age I sometimes fix me a few eggs in it. that I had to put dishwashing soap in it and let it soak overnight just to remove the pieces of stuck eggs. Sent by Cuisinart an email about the above problem and was told to take 2 or 3 accurate photos showing stuck eggs and send Cuisinart. I emailed them back and suggested they do some of the work to help me, since my age is 73, does not allow me to do much more for various health reasons, Cuisinart response --bed too bad, do it your own way or shut up. My point is just to be careful buying anything with Cuisinart on it because they are Rotten. Deborah from Shreveport, LA Verified Reviewer Original review: September 12, 2020TOA-60 Cuisinart AirFryer Oven. I needed a little countertop when I moved to the retirement center. My claim was that I could fit a 12-inch pizza in it, that I could bake bread in a loaf pan, it was in my price range (life on social I looked online at all available options and chose the Cuisinart TOA-60 AirFryer Toaster Oven. When the oven arrived I hooked it up, put the oven thermometer inside, and set the temperature to 350 degrees. Degrees. Waiting for the temperature to 350 degrees, but he never did. The temperature kept going up! I tried all the different settings and the temperature will never keep steady. A steady temperature is necessary for baking. I called Cuisinart and explained the problem and they sent me another oven. When he was here, I hooked him up and repeated the temperature check. Temperatures did not hold steady. It seemed that there was no thermostat at all. It would just keep getting hotter. Once again I called Cuisinart and they politely said they would send me another one. I asked the rep if I could get a refund and she explained that they would not do so, but could issue a loan to another Cuisinart product. I told her that I really needed an oven that would work, and the odds weren't in favor of the next oven running either. She said they'd send me another one or give me a loan without any other options. I said well then, send another oven. They sent another one and it has the same problems as the others. I looked online and saw that other people had the same problem with the same problem. I'm not sure what the statistics are, but a large percentage of people have had this issue and it seems wrong that Cuisinart wasn't dealing with it or that at least they should offer a refund. I am very disappointed with Cuisinart. Read the full review of Thomas Kincardine, ON Verified Reviewer Original review: August 15, 2020I owned two cuisinart's grind and brew coffee makers. The last one was the DGB-900 B.C. first developed a leak in the heating coil, but was just out of warranty, so Cuisinart did nothing for me. I bought the second one because I realized the first one was just an accident. NOPE... The next one leaked just like the first and after the warranty expired. Searching the internet for the first time had other customers complaining about the same problem. I would hope Cuisinart would fix the problem but apparently not. Such a shame because I loved to grind and cook convenience. Fool me once, shame on you. Fool me twice, shame on me. This time bought Moccamaster made in the Netherlands. I hope it lasts as long as they say it will. This makes an excellent cup of coffee, much better than Cuisinart. Time will tell. Read the full review of Barbara N. Charleston, S.C. Verified Reviewer Original Review: August 3, 2020First of all, it's programmable. I can program it to wake me up at the right time I like. It grinds fresh beans, which is a plus for me. Secondly, I like French roasts and coffee is great. Best of all it's easy. I hear grinding, I smell coffee and wake up on a pleasant day. NO hurry, no bother. Just enjoy my morning Joe. Sharon from Hagerstown, MD Verified Reviewer Original Review: August 3, 2020The Cuisinart and Grinds beans are fresh. I use for years! Strong, keeps the coffee hot and I don't need to buy filters. Easy to clean and virtually indestructible. I was also able to buy spare parts easily. It's fully programmable so I can set it to start in the morning before I wake up. Next
