The Hunters of Books and Clothing, All Rights are protected. 043Free content Friday. Vol. 043 March 2014, SandstormAlhameed ran as fast as he could, clawing for the levers up to a large sand bank as the manipulative material forced him back down for every leg he got. He managed to avoid unrest outside Cairo, it was worse than any political riot he had even seen. When the screams started, he thought it was just riot police firing more gas canisters they had fired them before. Then people started eating each other. He threw his back to the stiff column. He heard the cries of the men below pointing to his trail coming up the hill. When Alhamid turned around to notice a huge gaping hole in the found tomb in front of him. He froze indecision. There was excavation materials scattered around, and the ribbon blocking the entrance snapped and was now flapping in the wind. Are these also smears of blood along the inner wall of the entrance? He had to decide whether his superstition was stronger than his desire to be shot? The new riding animal will not be able to control their grief if he is spooked. In order to scare off the horse, 1d3 instant noise must be created in one round. As a result, environmental modifiers for arid animals will not affect the need of camels for food and water. New hazards, if there are open body parts, take 1d6 damage for each time spent in a storm. It will also increase the complexity of navigation checks equal to arid and wind-energy modifiers. The duration of this hazard is 3d6 times. At the end of the term, GM can pay the cost of the risk and run it again. This can continue as long as GM wishes to maintain the risk costs. Undead.
