If your income (depending on your family size) is less or equal to the amounts below, you may be eligible for SNAP benefits. If your family's gross income is lower than these amounts, it does not guarantee that you will be eligible for the benefit. The SNAP budget should be calculated for your family to determine eligibility and the amount of the benefit. The only way to determine whether your family is eligible for SNAP benefits is to apply. Gross income means total, not excluded household income before any deductions are made, such as taxes or other deductions. Net income means gross income minus permissible deductions. He is a full-time student and is a single parent who is responsible for caring for a dependent child under the age of 12. Receiving Unemployment Benefits (UIB). The Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) issues monthly electronic benefits that can be used as cash to buy food from authorized retail food stores. Visit myBenefits.ny.gov and click Do I'm Eligible? to check your rights to SNAP benefits and other benefits of the human services program. For more information about SNAP, please visit: eligibility for benefits and benefits are based on family size, income and other factors. Income means your family's total gross monthly income before taxes and deductions. Benefits from other assistance programs such as unemployment insurance, government aid, Social Security or SSI benefits are considered income. Some household expenses, such as monthly child support payments paid by your family member for a child who does not live with you, may be deducted from your family's gross income. The SNAP budget should be calculated for your family to determine the eligibility and amount of the benefit. The only way to determine whether your family is eligible for SNAP benefits is to apply. In New York State, SNAP now allows you to have more money in a checking or savings account, or even a retirement account or college savings account without affecting your eligibility for SNAP benefits. Most households applying for SNAP benefits no longer need to pass a savings/resource test to get SNAP benefits. This means that household assets (stocks, savings and pension accounts, etc.) are not considered when determining eligibility. Please note that if you are applying for SNAP benefits, you may still be asked to provide information about such resources: SNAP App To find out if you are eligible for SNAP, you need to apply for SNAP/Recertification (LDSS-4826) with the Jefferson County Department of Social Services.
