This content is old, go here to start a new post. Hi, I've never seen it on 16+ using USPS for my eBay sale: To return to the charming agent-your-item has been charming on the return agent at 8:12 pm in Fayetteville, NC 28302. The mail service no longer has an item and no further track updates are expected. I just had a buyer walk over me about his package, which is unfair. He bought late on Tuesday night, I got wednesday, today Thursday. He now desires answer , and the Lord helps me to sanitise him . Post Office doesn't know what it means! How is this possible? I was on the phone with them for an hour. He said he'd call me back. Yes right. The most thing is, I show that I sent it yesterday on two packages! Everyone for a different state. I asked this question here (I searched) and there is no answer. I am praying that somebody should help me . Edit: Plwease, I sent usPS first class. I didn't use another career. I never do. I only use USPS and always make electronic labels using payment-pal. Every time. For third party delivery, i.e. postal service with the hand of another carrier, www.tracking.smartlabel.com track the package on the other hand. It probably will not show the original or destination view, but should show the status in such transit or delivery. Take the label # code from your USPS receipt and first the 8-number edit erm; The rest is your Bedex tracking number. If you enter tracking for #USPS it will send you the message to the charming agent and show it to the shipping partner next to it. I had A FedEx. I put the same tracking #(usps #) into the tracking of the fedex and found the delivery receipt. So just use the original tracking # in the Shipping Partners site. Sometimes when you order a package it will come through Ups or Fedex. Then they will close usps for final delivery. The same time is when you return an item. Send you a pbq via USPS and back it up or return to FEDEX. So you have two tracking numbers. For a USPS that it was accepted in the post office. The second tracking number was by the fedex which showed that it was actually back to the company and I got the simple answer: I entered the label #! #for tracking by it instead of looking back at your re-copy. I bet it's the same thing for you too. Label #usps is some kind of internal tracking for use. The original tracking number says that (USPS tracking #) good luck Google Address. This scan is sometimes used when the package is delivered to a 3rd party which is considered to scan its delivery. Once I've seen this scan when the package is delivered to a mall foreword, there are anything in Florida that has an IPI scanner and is considered to scan packages but that's so Do. One life we all have to do * This was already * I just got it, this USPS priority mail 2 days. I dropped him at the post office location monday 8 August 2017 and got him back and for the charming agent. Where it is always sitting . To make things worse I left the package on my way out of town and I'll be back in town by Friday or Saturday. I plan on increasing hell with the post office whenever It appears, or in its 2 days time was not sent usps priority mail 2day, and I will demand that they give me $50 insurance automatically that I paid for a service and it is totally their fault I have. The thing was exactly the way i was with me this week. I brought 4 packages to the post office on Monday and just checked and it appears that 1 is delivered and the second 3 is exactly the same notice you've never seen before. I'm going to the post office in the morning to see what's going on with it and if he has any answers about what it means. I've been using USPS for years and I've never seen this notice on keeping informed before, maybe a glitch? Your buyer is being unfair. If ordered on Tuesday, he cannot expect that the item should be given on Wednesday. If he does not receive the item by that, he can open a claim. Until then, he must wait. Assure you that you are trying to solve the problem of being informed. Also, you don't have to respond to any inappropriate allegations. (If he gets threatened or abused, you may need to report it)-this is against the EC policy). If he open a case, and since usps provide some kind of glitch, if it is not track then the package may need to file a claim with them. Sometimes I get spoons in USPS but the package still gets on its destination. The next scan point can update the track for this package. I hope it works for you this way. Shipping that heghe type of smart post when you said you called mumper on the USPS website? They always had more information that a local post office. If it was a smart post, you must first contact Fafaappar who handled the package. The highlighted highlighted highlighted significantly highlighted highlights to important content highlighted is the prominenthighlightl returned my old phone for new with the USPS label provided by AT&T.
