GLK Crossover, the predecessor of the GLC class, was released to the public in 2008. The platform of the car body became an S204 (C class) station wagon equipped with a gasoline turbocharger R4 engine with a capacity of 2 liters (184 hp and 211 horsepower), V6 3.0 and 3.5 (231 to 306 hp), diesel 2.1 and 3.0 (143 to 265 hp). Drive – rear or full, gearbox – 6 st. MKPP or 7 st. Automatic transmission .2012, GLK class experienced re styling. In the cabin, the ventilation square deflector gave way to round one: the car was changed to the outside, changed bumpers and optics, and internally. A new version of the engine has appeared. In 2015, it was announced that production of the GLK class model had been discontinued. Instead, he made his debut in Stuttgart, Germany and introduced a new GLC class. Relative models of the latest generation C-class models are built on the modular platform MRA. It allowed the car to be lightened by 80 kg with the growth of wheelbase and external dimensions. Out of this savings, 50kg falls on the body that combines aluminum with high strength steel and aluminum, and the rest is the benefit of suspension with a more compact transfer case of aluminum parts and transmission. The volume of the trunk increased by 110 liters to 580 liters. In the United States, it is planned to produce more powerful engines like the first of the GLC 300 4MATIC, GLC 300d and hybrid engine 350 e4MATIC segments. The coupe version was introduced as a concept at the 2015 exhibition in Shanghai and will be released in 2016. According to the company's plans, it will compete in crossover markets such as the BMW X4 and Porsche Macan. We plan to expand the range of versions of the GLC class in the future. Version.
