Korean MMO Blade and Soul are currently gaining popularity by making a complete transition to the Western market. Not only is it a very enjoyable MMO with stylized Wuxia art and a lively, enjoyable combat system, but it's also a free game. While the mechanics of Blade and Soul are easy to understand, it has a few unique features that are either not well explained or not obvious during the first few minutes of the game. Here are some tips to help the average player get off to the best start in the game. Focus on Maxing Out Your Weapon While bread and butter most RPGs is a constant purchase of new weapons and equipment, Blade and Soul instead offers a rich crafting and upgrade system that allows you to upgrade your starting weapons enough to last you well in the game if you're smart. After class you will be given a Hongmoon weapon based on your class, and you will most likely never have to use any other weapon, so don't sell it. Instead, you use any similar weapon you find by accident or get as prizes as suggestions to upgrade this starting weapon. If you kill an early boss often enough, you will find that you have maxed out the weapon before you reach Level 10. Use a full soul shield Here's a little tip within the tip: Clothes in Blade and Soul are completely cosmetic. There is no use wearing any outfit (although sometimes wearing one is a disadvantage; see below), so choose whatever you think looks better (or stupid) on them. Instead of physical armor, the characters have what is called a shower shield that represents the 18 parts of the disc you can find in your inventory menu. The soul shield provides all the protection and bonuses traditionally associated with armor, and the presence of all eight parts in the kit can provide even more protection. You also have the option to have an alternative shield to which you can switch, providing you with greater versatility. Fashion can kill I said the outfits are completely cosmetic and they are against statistics and defense. However, as an addition to this, there are some outfits that may give you some particularly unwanted attention. Some outfits are mostly open season calls that give other players carte blanche to attack you. In the starting village you will encounter factions of Crimson and Cerulean, and you are told that you can only join one, while the other may attack you. It's simple enough, but they're not the only factions that offer such outfits, and it may not always be obvious which outfits will open you up for attacks by which other factions. So if you don't want to be attacked by other players, see what you're wearing. Spin to win one of the advantages of entering Blade and Soul The day is that you can use all your free features to spin the Daily Dash wheel. When you do, you get a number that the number of spaces you can move around the game game There is a prize every few places and your character will get it when they land or pass over it. While the prizes are usually not too impressive, the ones that are available at the very beginning of the board are things the average player will probably need, such as repairing tools or keys. Logging in and doing your daily spin will allow you to stash some materials for your character and maybe have a chance at something less often on the board you get. Don't waste the keys and print out the charms at the beginning of the game, you are given free keys and printout charms to allow you to use decent weapons and soul shields in no time. Each key and charm can only be used a certain number of times. They are also very expensive. It is in your best interest to keep them for later. Once you get your first mental shield and have exhausted your first weapon, both of which are likely to happen very early in the game, do not bother printing out any weapons received or unlocking any chests. For any unwanted items, you can always ... Rescue, salvation, salvation, when you first get unwanted weapons and parts of the soul shield, you may be tempted to sell them on the spot. However, given that each item for the first few places nets one copper apiece, it can be incredibly time consuming. So instead, click on the item and choose a little icon that allows you to save it. Saving weapons, mental shields and accessories gives you the opportunity to get transmutation powders. You can use them in the Transmute screen to create valuable items such as bags and chests that will give you random items. Also, the junk pieces that you get from the rescue cost more in the store than the weapons themselves, so the player benefits anyway. The Blade and Soul Jumping channel uses channels in their servers that help prevent over-boring. Whenever you find yourself in a certain area and there are too many people around, you can press a button that will lead you to another channel in the server. The main way it is useful is when you want to take on the bosses. Since farm bosses respawn in the same places every few minutes, many players tend to cluster around them to get a chance to kill them, or at least land a few hits. If you find that you are at the point of spawn and there are too many players grouped around, try switching channels in order to find one less populated. Go on achievements in Blade and Soul, there is an extensive list of achievements. Some of them can be obtained for something as simple as having a screenshot. Some of them can only be obtained in the endgame. However, they are all worth getting. Achievements in this game give you stat bonuses that can players, especially in the early stages of the game. Check the list and see which ones you can get quickly. Although keep in mind that these statistics will be annulled Arena PvP. Trade at level 15 If it seems as if you are having a big problem with getting the item you want at the beginning of the game, then focus on alignment instead. When you reach level 15, you can get into the auction house where all the other players can buy and sell items. The auction house can be obtained anywhere in the game and can be a source of potential equipment and even in-game revenue, depending on how many rare items you can get. If you find yourself stuck in a rut against your items at the beginning of the game, level up to 15 is quick to gain access. Although keep in mind, you will have to pay a fee to get the item ordered if you are not actually at the provider, so going one can save you money.
