Delaware is an introduction to the history of the Hearn family and the old Herr ledger or DayBookIn 1973 both my father (Jim Hearn) and I came across a torn document in my grandmother's attic entitled Our Father's Diary - Tales of a Confederate Veteran! This group is in a lifelong quest to discover the heritage of our family! In the year following our introduction to our family history, we accidentally found the monumental work of William T. Hearn of Independence, Missouri entitled The History and Genealogy summary of the Hearn family at the Virginia State Library. After having copies made of many 1907 edition papers (1895 edition, being the first), we set out to discover everything we could about this original William Hearn, a London merchant, who was repeatedly mentioned in that work. W.T. Hearn had an old ledger merchant, who was on hand in 1890, and we wondered if any of the ledger might still be in existence! (There is a copy of a part of one of Ledger's pages in his book between pages 26 and 27, along with many printed excerpts from various other papers on pages 27-30.) I'm gettingThe signs of both Independence, MO. and Lexington, Kentucky since many of the Hearn family (e) settled in both areas and it seems that this was the way that old Ledger took when he left the shores of Maryland, where our WM. Hearn had settled in 1680. My hope in doing so is that I may find some of his grandchildren with the valuable information we have sought. After writing letters for most of all herren (e) s included in those phone books, I'm waiting for responses. One letter resulted in an elderly man, Charles W. Hearn of Independence, who owned a copy of the 1907 edition of The Short History. After several correspondence with him, he admitted that there were no living grandchildren to leave a copy of this precious book with him, so he was separated with him for a small sum. My father eagerly moved on this opportunity to get our own copy! Mr. Charles M. Hearn has also been in contact with Mr. Arval F. Hearn of Ashland, Ky. Arval is attached to a similar journey in the history of his branch of the Hearn family. However, what was of greatest interest to us was his comments regarding his contact with Mr. Bill Hearn (also from Ashland, KY.) who was supposed to be in possession of the old Ledger, which originally belonged to merchant William Hearn. Arval told us that Bill kept the ledger in an insurance box in his bank, yet he had agreed to remove it for a day in order that Arval might make a zerox version. If you are interested, Arval said, I will make a second version when I have access to Ledger and mail you! Again, our enthusiasm knew no boundaries!!! This is how we acquired a copy of William Hearn Ledger's Daily Book from the late 16th century. Mr. Arval Hearn gave us contact information with Bill Hearn's sister in Kentucky because she might be able to answer any other questions we might have this letter dated 14 January 1974 from Mrs. Ellen Hearn Coxie that read: Dear Mr. Hearn, I'm sorry to have spent so much time writing but I had some problems - I have no idea how Bill Hearn, my brother, came to be Ledger, unlike the eldest son, down the lines that seem to be possession. He's going to squeeze it either in KY. Historical Library or KY University. The library - with regard to the book on genealogy - I understand that it was destroyed by Clement Hearn's second wife. I've written a copy of Hearne's history, so if you can just give me what dates and people you're looking for maybe they were in it, I could check it out for you. There are 750 pages and many families listed up in all probability you are in it. We would be pleased to be of help to you. Honestly, Ellen H. Coxie. These were the only correspondence I had with Elaine, and I didn't see her, nor Arval. I have contact information with Bill Hearn, and I did not try to contact him directly. I recently checked with both the Kentucky Historical Librarian and KY University. The librarian does not seem to have Hearn Ledger in their acquisitions. Bill Hearn had two sons, one after Bill's death and the other moved to Florida and I couldn't contact him! A ledger or daybook seems to have been delivered over the years from father to son. She usually follows the eldest son's path, but the eldest son was not always interested in family genealogy as he was not always in the right place and time to be given the coveted book. Starting with William Hearn, the merchant, Ledger was acquired by his youngest son, Thomas Hearn, sometime after the death of his father in 1691. From Thomas passed to his son, Ebenezer Hearn, then to his son, Clement Hearn who took Ledger with him to Kentucky. Clement then passed it on to Joseph Hearn, then to Joseph's son, William Cannon Hearn, who gave it to his son Joseph Clement Hearn. It was Joseph Clement who gave it to his son, Silas William Hearn, who is our Bill Hearn of Ashland, Kentucky. All three of these people made by the former have now passed long ago off the scene! Ellen Hearn Coxie and her husband were the victims of the Ashland Dinner Club fire in Southgate, Ky. Bill Hearn of Ashland died in 1987 and Arval Hearn passed in the early 1990s. Without their help and commitment to the family genealogy none of the contacts we had recently made with William Hearn, a London merchant who died on the east shore of Maryland in 1691 and his English ancestors were ever possible! With sincere gratitude to those who paved the way for us and for those who will follow us so far and allow us to dig deeper! James Batson Hearn, Jr. Jay Avoca, New York marks Hearn's grave placed in Hearn Freeney Cemetery outside Delmar, MD/DE in 1907 (2016 photo) Jim Hearn and his son, Jay (James Batson Hearn, Father and Son) looking at their version of 1907 Hearn's history shortly after the discovery of william freeman's book letters, London Merchant 1678-1685. This leads directly to the finding of the parents of William Hearn, a merchant in 1679 London, England.
