Posted on July 15, 2014 in Blog, Preschool , July 15, 2014 | 9 comments I enjoyed a 2 week break as my four munchkins and Australian schools had winter holidays before term 3 began. My greatest joy was that I didn't have to do my usual school run in the morning and afternoon... I know. It's ridiculous. But you do not understand ... As you can see, we recently moved house ... And now, I'm almost 2 hours just on my way to get the kids to school and come back home. So of course now I understand why I have to make the ☺ note for me, we also had a few days out, celebrated a birthday and even managed to make time to go snow. But let's focus on why we're here today! Preschool Letter of the Week K! Before we begin, I would like to remind you that kiddos belong to this group as I learn my little munchkin; Meaning, while his older brother and sister are doing their homework, he hangs around to watch all the action and often peeks over his shoulders as they write. And so, when I raised the letter K play dough mat to introduce the letter and letter sound, he said, it says a kick k and k. It's almost like c, but it doesn't look the same. Yes. Here it is; he summed up my 5 minute intro with these 2 sentences. So we kept playing and started working with the Playdough mat. He started by finger-following the letters and used a whiteboard sign like we did before. My goal for the letter K was to teach him that he made the same sound as Krin C, but it just looked different, so this week I wanted to focus on letter identification rather than letter sounds. Then I took out our K-Letter Word Cards and I got Filip to throw the kicks in the circle. We then used the Find Letter K worksheet to work on case identification; Filip had a hard time explaining the difference, and he told me he was going to put it all in purple. he also worked on letter formation using the K-letter application page from Measured Mother. We went to our focus number for the week and started by finger-following number 3 on the playdough mat. And then Filip used the whiteboard sign! We finished Day 1 with a cut and paste preschool numbers worksheet. Filip has become more confident in sounding out words and often tries to read everything he thinks looks interesting. Here, he tried to make a t-h-r-e-e sound, but it didn't sound right. We underlined some special sounds using different colors and then just came right! Isn't it just that I love this oversized spot that's it'??? We started day 2 with letter K playdough mats. This time Filip used play dough, pinching a little at a time and creating this stunning look: And because we had to cut that day really short of school time, we only managed to squeeze the Number 3 play dough mat ... K letter page created by Mariela Santillana. We went back the next day and worked on our K-letter puzzle. I then worked on strengthening the muscles of the finger with this printable 1plus1plus1plus1equals1. And sprinkled with glitter: We also read some CVC words using our Starter K Word Slider Cards. Then I did some CVC Start K puzzles: And also some Start K word builders! Then we passed our focus number and dotted his way through the maze of Filip number 3: Then we did a preschool number 3 study... And we ended the day with our number three cover book. He drew some red dots under each word to help with the 1-1 correspondence as he read the booklet. We came back for 4 days this week and Filip made a Start K CVC cut and paste worksheet. And finished with the craft of the week: K for king and k for kangaroo. And here it is! Preschool Letter K complete!
