Extracted from Africa is the second largest and second most populous continent in the world after Asia. Africa covers 11.73 million miles² and has a population of more than 1.2 billion people. Africa has a total of 54 countries, but more than 54 capitals. Some countries have many capitals, such as Ivory Coast and South Africa. Unlike other countries, the capitals of African countries do not show much interest in tourists. Capitals are home to important resources such as hospitals, banks and embassies. The largest capital is Cairo, the capital of Egypt. Cairo has a population of about 6.6 million and is currently the 15th most populous country in the world. Cairo is known for its architecture and iconic ancient monuments such as the pyramids of Giza. The capital is also Africa's third richest city. Ivory Coast has two capital cities. Yamusukro is the political capital and the port city of Abidjan is the economic capital. Abidjan is also Ivory Coast's largest city. In south Africa there are three capitals: Cape Town (legislative), Bloemfontein (judicial) and Pretoria (administrative). These three capitals are the result of the political and cultural struggles faced by colonialism in South Africa. In 1910, as a compromise, an alliance of South African countries was reached to spread the balance of power throughout the country. Cape Town is the second richest city in Africa. The least populous capital in Africa is Maseru in Lesotho, with a population of 14,000 people. Below is a table of the capital of each African country. Less economically developed, many countries on the continent have the lowest quality of life in the world. The two capitals, Cape Town and Pretoria in southern Africa, are considered the best places to live in the region. The most visited cities are Cape Town, Cairo and Tunisia. These tourist destinations are popular with those looking for bright colors, ancient monuments, natural attractions and exotic wildlife along with beautiful beaches. The capitals such as Nairobi, Dakar, Port Louis and Antananarivo are less well known, but also very exciting.
