According to Andrea Reiter Updated September 28, 2017 Mozilla Firefox browser includes a pop-up blocker that prevents websites from opening new windows without your permission. With the blocker enabled, you get a notification from Firefox whenever the website tries to open a new window and you are given the opportunity to open the window manually or ignore it. Pop-ups are an integral part of the function of some websites such as online gaming sites and financial institutions websites, making it necessary to temporarily disable the Firefox pop-up blocker. Select Tools from the top of the Firefox window. Select Options from the drop menu. Select the Content tab. Remove the window next to the Pop-up Block to disable this feature. Click OK at the bottom of the Options window. To block new windows from some sites, but not from others, sell the pop-up block feature and click the Exception button next to it. Enter the name of the website for which you want to allow pop-ups and click The Permission button to add it to the list. iOS 9 introduced content blockers for Safari. They function primarily as ad blockers, but they can also be used to block tracking data and other items. After weeks of testing and research, we chose 1Blocker as the best of the bunch so far. Note: While a lot of mobile ads are nasty, please remember that ads are like sites as we earn enough money to run. So if you don't want all your favorite sites to go out of business, We humbly remind you of the white list of sites you like. 1BlockerPlatform: iPhone/iPadPrice: Free ($2.99 Pro)Download Page How to include content blockers in iOSContent blockers not included by default, and they take a few steps to customize: Download content blocker of choice from iTunes App Store.Head in settings qgt; Safari zgt; Blockers of content installed and installer. As for the inclusion of content blockers, that's all you have to do. However, some apps have customized settings to customize to block or unlock certain content, so it's worth jumping into the app to change any settings as well. Features7,000 pre-installed blockersCreate their own custom blockersTon settings, including blocking specific tracking widgets, specific advertisers, specific types of content, and moreBlock whole sites, cookies, and specific URLLsWhitelisting Where it's Excels1Blocker is all about tinkering, so you have tons of settings to tinker with. If you go for $2.99 you can choose what's blocked and what's not. This means you can just block ads, block trackers, get rid of social media widgets, block comments, and pretty much everything else. Essentially, you have the freedom to choose what's blocked, that is you you Set up 1Blocker to your liking. Better yet, if 1Blocker doesn't block something, you can use a web editor to create your own custom rules and block basically anything you want. In addition, tests conducted by Brooks Review and The New York Times have shown that 1Blocker is consistently in the top tier of ad blockers both to improve web page download speeds and to reduce data consumption. G/O Media may get a commission Where it drops ShortThe only common complaint is the price, but while you have options for free ad blockers (more on those below), 1Blocker is the only one that gives you complete control over what's blocked and also offers the option of a white list to get through the sites you want. Contest You have an insane number of options for different ad blockers, so we can't cover all the competition. However, some stand out more than others. For free ad blockers, Refine (Free) is one of your best options. You can customize which blockers work, add new blockers, create special triggers so you can't go to certain websites, and easily white list any sites you want. If you don't want to pay for 1Blocker, Refine is the best free option we tested. Purify (99) is another popular ad blocker and consistently is one of the fastest, beating even 1Blocker at page loading time in some tests. While you can block ads, comments and certain types of files, Purify doesn't have a ton of extra options. Crystal (99 euros), Adamant ($1.99) and Blockbear (99 euros) are also worthy of alternatives, although each one takes a simplified approach and does not offer much in the way of options. You can turn on ad blockers and that's about it, although Blockbear at least has a white list option. They get the job done but don't expect a ton of options. Television - you either love it or hate it. Or love-hate him? Anyway, we all have a deep if sometimes ambivalent relationship with our TVs. We use TV to relax, get information, stay connected, learn things, waste time, forget about problems, and the list can go on and on. Unsurprisingly, many have tried (and mostly failed) to offer a truly portable TV watch device. And then there was the smartphone, bringing the silicon brain and the look of hi-res screens to the mainstream consumer. Increasingly larger smartphones these days can double as TVs without problems, provided you have the right apps. So for all of you TV maniacs, we bring you the best apps, Transform your Android device into a TV, so you can enjoy your favorite comedy, ball game, or reality show wherever you are.
