Download it on the Google Play Store. Download Fast Reboot Pro ROOT v1.3.3.apk Download the full Church Guide It came to our attention that part of the amendment to the Church leadership voted in July 2015 was inadvertently excluded from the revised leadership of the Church. In the section that appears on page 127, you should read: Who can hold the sacrament - the sacrament should be ordained/commissioned by a pastor or ordained elder. Deacons or deacons are not allowed to conduct service. (The words that were yilyste were voted on at the 2015 GC session, but were inadvertently omitted in the latest edition of the Church Leadership.) Download the updated page 127 only Why does the Seventh-day Adventist Church have Church leadership? God is the God of order, as evidenced by His works of creation and redemption. Therefore, order belongs to the essence of His church. Order is achieved on the basis of the principles and rules that guide the church in its inner workings and in fulfilling its mission in the world. In order to be a successful church organization in the service of the Lord and humanity, it needs order, rule, and discipline. Scripture argues that everything is done in dignity and order (1 Cor. 14:40) Adventist Church co-founder Ellen G. White pointed out such needs in 1875: The Church of Christ is in constant danger. Satan seeks to destroy the people of God, and the mind of one man, the judgment of one man, is not enough to be trusted. Christ would like His followers to come together in a church-like capacity, keeping order, having rules and discipline, and all obey each other, honoring others better than themselves (Evidence for the Church, Volume 3, p. 445). But church leaders did not quickly release a book of church governance rules, though the general conference was held annually in the early years of the church and delegates voted on issues of church order and life. Finally, in 1882, the General Conference of the session voted to prepare instructions to Church officers, which would be printed in the Review and the Herald or in the form of a treatise (Review - Herald, December 26, 1882). This shows the growing awareness that order is necessary for the organization to function effectively and for its guidelines to be printed. However, when the proposal for articles to be permanent as a Church guide came before the general conference session of 1883 delegates rejected the idea. They were afraid can formalize the church and give its pastors their individual freedom to deal with order at will. But this fear, undoubtedly reflective of the opposition that existed 20 years ago in any organization, apparently soon diminished. The annual sessions of the general conference continued to take action on issues of order. Although the church officially refused to accept the leadership, the leaders from time to time gathered together in a book or booklet, form the generally accepted rules of church life. Perhaps most impressive was the 184-page book, published in 1907 by pioneer J.N. Loughborough, titled Church, Its Organization, Order, and Discipline, addressed many of the topics currently covered by this Church leadership. As the church grew rapidly in the early twentieth century, it increasingly accepted the need for leadership for worldwide use by its pastors and laymen. In 1931, the General Conference Committee voted to publish the Church's leadership. J.L. McElhani, later chairman of general conference, produced the manuscript, which was published in 1932. The introductory preface to this first edition notes that it is becoming increasingly clear that church governance is needed to learn and preserve our confessional practices and statehood. Notice the word save. This was not an attempt to suddenly create and impose an entire model of Church governance on the Church. Rather, it was an attempt to first preserve all the good things that have been taken over the years, and then add the rules required by the growing growth and complexity of the Church.
