Versao do APK2.6.25.6Compatibilidade AndroidAndroid 10 (Android10)DesenvolvedorPermissions62Informa'o Detalhada Dedicated Work on some old Samsung phones Samsung introduced a new feature called Bixby Routines for their phones last year, allows you to set up simple automated rules for certain actions - like IF TTT, or a less powerful, built-in version of Tasker for Samsung phones. Although it's available on devices such as the Galaxy S10, Note10 and Galaxy Fold, Samsung has never brought this feature to the old S9 or Note9, even in the latest Android 10/One UI 2 updates. However, we've checked that sideloading the latest version of the Bixby Routines app brings a feature for older devices, including the Galaxy S9 and Note9, and it also works for some on older devices such as the Galaxy S8 running Android Pie. Galaxy S9 with Android 10/One UI 2 without the installed Bixby Routines app (left) and with installed (right). Note the addition of the Bixby Routines switch and settings. This solution is pretty easy to swing: The Galaxy S9 or Note9 runs Android 10/One UI 2, just install the Bixby Routines app from a trusted source like the APK Mirror (a site that we're also launching), and check on the new option in the settings- Advanced Features. At the top should be a new option for Bixby Routines, enabled by default. Click on the left side of this button (i.e. no switch) and you'll be taken to a list of customizable settings that are identical to those offered on the Galaxy S10/Note10, as far as we can tell. PreviousNext Workflow creates a new Bixby Routine (in this case for automated gym tunes). The only significant difference we may find is that you need to manually add Bixby Routines quick settings to switch if you want to use it; it doesn't appear on its own when you sideloaded the app that way, but fixing that is as simple as opening the order editor button across the three-point menu in the corner of the fully expanded Menu Of Fast Settings and dropping where you like: We specifically tested this method of installing and using Bixby Routines on an unlocked Galaxy S9 running the latest Android 10/One 2 release and can confirm it works on this device. Some of our readers and tipsters have also confirmed that it works on Note9. It's possible you could run into problems with it that you might not experience on officially devices, but as far as we can tell, it works just fine. It can also work on earlier devices such as the Galaxy S8 running Android 9 9 although the reports of our readers are ambiguous. For some, it seems to work without any problems; others face application failures, among other problems. While Samsung has not explicitly stated whether Bixby Routines will be coming to older phones, there was a possibility that it could debut with recent Android 10 updates - a hope that was dashed almost as soon as the beta landed without it. It was a very often requested feature, without a clear explanation of its absence on older devices. It's not clear if this new workaround is an oversight or indication that the feature will arrive later in official capacity - there's clearly no software explanation for excluding it, since it works just fine - but in any case, those of you with the Galaxy S9, Note9, and other older Samsung phones can use Bixby Routines now with one side app. A: Blake, Capychimp, Beachey, and everyone who tested this for us Working on some old Samsung phones Some of our readers let us know that it works at least on some old Samsung phones as well, and we updated our post with these details.
