It's Saturday night. It's cold out there. Week by week, Christmas is getting closer. Your Chinese takeaway has arrived just in time for your family to stand in front of the TV before the show starts. You're excited. You're going to watch naive Britons all over the country embarrass themselves because the producers told them they were talented and sold them fake dreams to get better ratings! In 2010, it was fun. It's pretty tragic. Where are the iconic X Factor auditions now? Have they found the fame they've been looking for? AbLISA Then: The famous duo shocked the world when their audition ended in a blow. The world hasn't seen AbLISA again, but they saw a lot of Abbey soon after the audition. He shot topless on Sunday Sport. Abbey was also interviewed by a local newspaper and admitted that she hoped she never did X Factor. He said: The whole experience was overwhelming and the incident has now stressed my family. Mom told me not to go on the show. Now I wish I'd listened. Listened. Because of what happened, Lisa and I, who used to do almost everything together, are no longer friends, and there are groups on Facebook saying I deserve a slap, which is terrible. These people really need to watch the show and see what happened before they comment. Even though I have anger issues, I just don't randomly hit people. I just want to apologize to Lisa and her mom and also to the judges because I talked a lot during the audition, which I regret. Ariel Burdett: Ariel's holistic vocals didn't take her very far on X Factor, but now she claims it was all a performance. Now: She goes with Arabella Starchild and this is her latest job. Amy Burdett (her real name?) said on her new YouTube channel: Ariel will never be seen again. I made that decision a long time ago. There's no place for him, and his hair has been destroyed. He was the only one. Zoe Alexander Then: The singer claimed that producers encouraged her to audition as a Pink impersonator, only to be shot down by judges because she didn't have her own style. He's still singing. But not pink. He has a YouTube channel where he records song covers. Ant and Seb Then: Ant and Seb's version of Mysterious Girl is undeniably better than origin. Although it didn't get them to the next round. No one knows what happened to this iconic duo, but I often lie in bed wondering how their lives are. Rachel Lester, a.k.a. Evil Rachel Then: She was called one of the ansiest X-Factor contestants. Someone caught him traveling around town a few years ago. Debbie Stevens spooked the judges when they didn't like her version of When You Believe and her attitude. Then he threw a glass of water at Louis Walsh. Unfortunately, Debbie has stayed out of the press ever since. Sophie Stokle: Sophie's family convinced her to go on X Factor because they believed she had a voice. You guessed it. He needed a few singing hours. Now: It's not known if she's singing yet, but she has a very positive Twitter account and this is what she looks like now! Cher Lloyd: If you don't sing Cher's version of Turn My Swag throughout middle school, you didn't live. Now: Cher continued her singing career in the UK and then moved to the US. She's also just had a baby. Chicken Factory Then: His squeasing performance of tragedy won the heart of the nation, but it didn't convince the judges. But did anyone else think her version of Barbie Girl was actually pretty good?? She was last seen in 2013 when she met X Factor winner Sam Bailey. They don't think he's going to sing. But he has a Twitter account. Ottavio and Bradley and Ultimate Chicken Fight Then: They were going to audition together, but had a massive fight over chicken. And They'll figure it out. It was pretty iconic. Bradley is now a TV personality and singer. He also has a YouTube channel. And Ottavio is a fashion PR graduate and sugar cane! Chloe Victoria, a.k.a. Chloe Khan at then Chloe Mafia audition in 2010. Chloe's a millionaire. He started a web company where he stripped down to the camera. The business was reported to have turned over £1 million a year in 2016. He's stopped being behind the camera, but he's still running the company. She also came to the Celebrity Big Brother house in 2016 and has a YouTube channel with over 31,000 subscribers.
