One theory of the significance of its cycle length is that 260 days correlate with pregnancy (source: Maya Secret School). Another assumes that the calendar represents the length of time it takes to grow corn. However, it is more likely that it was based on the Mayan reverence for numbers 13 and 20. In the Gregorian calendar, we have seven days a week and, depending on the month, somewhere from 28 to 31 days. The Tzolk'in calendar consists of a set of 20-day names symbolized by images called glyphs and 13 digits called tones. The days of the 2d are one to 13, and names are also given in sequence. The advent Start of the Tzolk'in calendar begins with the first day's name, Imix', and number one. The days go on sequentially, and the second day is a combination of Ica and number two; names and days numbers are combined in sequence until all 13 tones are used. Once the calendar reaches day 13, designated B'en and number 13, the numbers start again with one, but the day names move forward with the 14th glyph, Ix. Rotating like this, the two sets form 260 unique combinations of the day's name and number. For example, once you reach the end of the 7 Ajaw 7 day name cycle, the days' names start again in Imix, and the numbers continue: 8 Imix', 9 Ik', 10 Ak'b'al, and so on. This content is not compatible on this device. Think of two interconnected gears, with 13 digits marked around a smaller circular outfit that fits inside larger daytime names, denoted in hieroglyphics. If you lock these gears together at number one and day name Imix', then turn the gears until you reach one and Imix' again, you get 260 unique days. These gears spin up to the final combination of clicks into place at 13 Ajaw, marking the end of the year. It is easy to see the value of the Maya put in the calendar Tzolk'in. For example, they believed that the date of your birth determines the characteristics that you will show in your personality - just as some people believe that your astrological sign does today. The Holy People also schedule certain events throughout the year based on the Tzolk'in calendar. At the beginning of each uinal (period of 20 days), the shaman will count forward to determine when religious and ceremonial events will occur. He will then choose dates that will be the most prosperous or the luckiest for society. Despite the many features, the Tzolk'in calendar still doesn't measure the sunny year, the time it takes for the sun to make a full cycle. Cycle, of this, the Maya need a more accurate calendar to track the length of time that we consider as a full year. The Monkeymen calendar is ready for people who would like to have the latest printouts of the month schedule placed on the fridge or tucked into a sheet protector in front of the binder. It's very easy to use (install a trial and you'll be able to watch a 90-second video tutorial). Enter the planned events for this month, add a few items to the to-do list, customize the view with a few clicks and print it out. No fuss with templates or PowerPoint.The calendar is visually appealing with a choice of 16 unique backgrounds (from muted steel blue to high energy Facial) and colorful stickers you can use to present special events such as football matches, birthdays and vacations. You can also custom-create your own stickers quite easily. You'll rely on these stickers, too, because the text you type in is quite small and somewhat hard to read. At least the to-do list elements are big and bold.
