Material suo motu/collated from other teachers by Ibrahim .... The lottery by Sherle Jackson usually teach for his 10th grade native speaking. First we start with the discussion on personal codes of truth and wrong. (Now I think of it, it may be related to referrals from animal farm.) Then we read the story. I love seeing their response till the end. After discussing the story, they can write a letter like they were Bills of The Itchsenson. The Garmians told him that there was a need for change in tradition. I studied the story and saw the film in high school and it is one of those experiences you never forget. good luck! I taught the lottery, and contrary to all my expectations, Israeli students (or at least 5 indicators I have taught) find it funny and boring rather than scary. It's true, however, I didn't prepare for any 'mental set' before reading them. I'm doing this coming year again, but with the giscussing the story and saw the film in high school and it is one of those experiences you never forget. good luck!
