There won't be blush on my name... [Elizabeth Proctor] hates me, uncle, you must, because I wouldn't be your slave. She's a bitter woman, a woman lying down, cold and unfaithly, and I'm not going to work for a woman like that! Abigail takes this joke against his uncle, reverend Parris, at the beginning of the first act of the work. Parris questioned her about rumors swirling around Salem that she was somehow behaving inappropriately while employed as a waitress on the Proctor farm. Abigail denies doing anything wrong and completely blames Elizabeth. Readers will soon learn that Abigail has been in a relationship with John Proctor, but this moment shows how much Abigail hates Elizabeth Proctor and her willingness to lie. I'm looking for John Proctor who took me out of my sleep and put knowledge in my heart. I never knew what salem's claim was, I never knew the lying lessons that were taught to me by all these Christian women and their covenanted men! And now you're offering to rip the light out of my eyes? I won't, I can't! You loved me, John Proctor, and whatever a sin it is, you still love me! Halfway through the first act, Arthur Miller gives us a short scene of John Proctor and Abigail together, revealing that he had a sexual relationship. Abigail is still in love with John, and wants to believe that he is still in love with her (even after he says he is not). Abigail's actions against Elizabeth are the result of his obsession. I want the light of God, I want the sweet love of Jesus! I danced for the devil; I saw it, I wrote in his book; I return to Jesus; I kiss His hand. I saw Sarah Good with the Devil! I saw Goody Osburn with the Devil! I saw Bridget Bishop with the Devil! This outburst comes at the end of Act I, after Tituba, a slave to reverend Parris, confesses witchcraft. Abigail sees Tituba's false confession as a way out of her dilemma: if she also admits to being a witch, she will be forgiven for throwing charm into the woods with Tituba and her friends.
