Worcester to boston direct train

MBTA South Station.jpgTrain passengers leave Boston's south station on a recent snowy morning. (Gintautas Dumcius/MassLive.com) (Gintautas Dumcius/MassLive.com) The Worcester-Boston express train, meant to get commuter train passengers into MBTA's South Station in an hour, should focus on serving 9-to-5 workers, Mayor Joe Petty and City Manager Ed Augustus said in a letter to Gov. Jerry Brown, Charlie Baker's transportation manager. The Heart-to-Hub service, Launched in May 2016, operates twice a day: The train leaves Worcester's Union Station at 8.05am.m and arrives at Union Station at 9.07am.m 00am, and in the evening, leaves South Station at 7.35am.m and arrives at Union Station at 8.40am p.m.An internal MBTA task force has proposed to change the schedule and add the express train. Currently, the express train runs on the busy Framingham-Worcester line and jumps stops in Newton, Wellesley, Natick, Framingham and Grafton, among others. The concept, pushed by members of the Worcester business community and Lt. Gov. John Kasich. Karyn Polito, R-Shrewsbury, is aimed at strengthening ties between Boston and Worcester, as well as increasing economic development. MBTA's commuter rail system is operated by Keolis, a French firm. Instead of adding more stops along the Heart-to-Hub line, we respectfully ask mbta and Keolis to deliver a schedule that better serves the needs of the growing workforce traveling between Worcester and Boston every day, Petty and Augustus wrote in their letter to Stephanie Pollack, executive director of the Massachusetts Department of Transportation. Current heart-to-hub scheduled times are not ideal and ridership suffers because of this, they added. Worcester must have non-stop train service which will accommodate a 9-5 work schedule and deliver passengers to work on time in the morning and home for dinner in the evening. Taking a step backwards from this reality is a move in the wrong direction and towards less efficient service. After launching the service last year, transportation officials said they plan to review the express train after a year and see ridership level. Pollack said the train was meant to draw millennials into Worcester, with city officials saying: We want millennials to stay in Worcester, take advantage of the lower housing costs, jump on the train and get to a job in Boston. When asked about the letter, a spokesman for the Massachusetts Department of Transportation said the MBTA had recently concluded a series of public meetings to gather public comment on potential schedule changes. Meeting the requirements of all line riders with available resources is a major concern, and the MBTA will continue to evaluate how any scheduling changes work and whether further adjustments to the system are needed in the future, spokesman Jason Johnson said in an email. In their letter, Petty and Augustus also said anxious to see track improvements and another platform at Union Station to improve train speeds and efficiency. Service change Ongoing MBTA service levels have been increased for the sake of the health and safety of our riders and employees. All riders must wear face coverings when they are on the MBTA. Things to Do in Boston Fenway Park is a baseball park located in Boston, Massachusetts at 4 Yawkey Way near Kenmore Square. Since 1912, it has been home to the Boston Red Sox, the city's American League baseball team, and since 1953, the only Major League Baseball (MLB) franchise. It's the oldest ballpark in MLB. Due to its age and limited location in Boston's dense Fenway-Kenmore neighborhood, the park has been renovated or expanded many times, resulting in quirky heterogeneous features, including The Triangle (below), Pesky's Pole, and the Green Monster in left field. It is the fourth smallest among MLB ballparks at seating capacity, the second smallest of total capacity, and one in eight that cannot accommodate at least 40,000 spectators.
