Tafsir al-Tabari was written by the Persian scholar Muhammad ibn Jarir al-Tabari (838-923). This original name was Jami al-Bayan tawilal al-Koran (meaning: A collection of statements on the interpretation of verses of the Koran). It's a Sunni tafsir. It was completed in 883. This is the earliest major running commentary of the Koran, which has been preserved in its original form. It is notable for its completeness and citation of various sources. Tabari relied on the stories of the Prophet Muhammad (PBUH), including narrations and comments of sahabah and tabi'in, where necessary. It delivers a chain of narratives for the reports included in the comments, sometimes clarifying the reliability of the narrators. This is his second great work after the History of the Prophets and Kings (Tarich al-Rusul Wa'l-Mouluk), also known as Tarich al-Tabari. He was a scholar, expert on tafsir (Koranic exegesis) and fakim (law), as well as a historian. He was taught by Ibn Tayya and Tafsir ibn qatar is considered to be considered version of an earlier tafsir, Tafsir al-Tabari. It's a solar tafsir. He explains the Koranic verses with hadiths and the statements of the Sahab. His other great works are Al-Bidaya van Nihaya (Beginning and End), Al-Sira al-Nabawiya, about the life of Muhammad and sisas al-Anbia (History of the Prophets). That means Tafsir from the two Jalals. It was first written by Jalal al-Din al-Ma'alli in 1459 and then completed by his disciple Jalal al-Din al-Souchi in 1505. Tafsir al-Jalalaine is one of the most significant tafsirs to study the Koran. It is also considered one of the most easily accessible works of the Koran exegesis because of its simple style and length of one volume. You hope based on a PC game made by Jason Rohrer.This app is not from him though, and he is not involved at all in creating it. Our game and online world are separated from it, and contain changes and exclusive additional materials that we have made ourselves. One important thing you do in this game is to name your kids (who are also players). You hope is what the mother will say when she gives the name Hope for her child. Your goal is to restore civilization from scratch, along with other players and through countless generations. You were born either as a child to one of the other players, or as a young woman if no suitable mother is found. Every minute of real time is one year in the game and your maximum age is 60 years. One life is limited, but the things you do during your life remain for your children and grandchildren once you are gone. Try to make life a little easier for those who come after you, so that your family line will have a chance to thrive for future generations. Sometimes you will spawn alone in the desert. You have to build a fire to keep warm and trap rabbits to get meat and fur for clothes. A sharp stone can be your best friend in the beginning. Try to find a good place to settle down and grow food because other players may soon arrive like your kids, and have to be cared for until they have grown enough to help you. Sometimes you will be born in a sprawling city, with farmers, cooks, blacksmiths, shepherds and hunters. There will be clothes and equipment ready for you, prepared by players who may be your grandparents or distant relatives. Maybe you'll gather friends and intend to start a settlement yourself, maybe you'll inherit a farm job from your uncle, or, Be, you will kill bears and wolves. The choice is endless, but remember: if you don't leave the world better after you've lived than when you arrived, you don't achieved anything. Every life you play will put you in touch with new players. Some are more experienced than you, some are smaller. Someone will teach you, and someone will learn from you. Some of them may even be destructive to the civilization you are building, and should be considered accordingly. It will be up to you and your fellow players to shape the world in a short moment of time before the next generation take over. Once your life game is over, you can look at your family tree and see how your descendants do. You can be proud of each of your younger relatives who survive in adulthood and in every new generation that follows you knowing that you have helped to do so. In issue 1.7.0, we've added IAP Family Ties, which adds observer mode and family chronicles. This is not necessary and you don't have to play the game.
