Editorial Reviews Publisher Summary USA TODAYThursday, March 23, 2000LIFE Best in the Eyes of Young Readers: Bob Minzesheimer Norman Rockwell painted her when she was 6, flanked by four federal marshals marching to New Orleans Elementary School in the event of integration. Nearly 40 years later, Ruby Bridges has turned her memories of the experience into a children's book. Today, Through My Eyes (Scholastic, $16.95) wins the award as the 1999 best non-fiction children's book that achieves humanitarian ideals and serves as an inspiration to young readers. Recommended for readers between the ages of 7 and 12. This is one of three awards from Bank Street College of Education in New York. Every year a children's book committee is organized on Bank Street - half-adult, half small. They review 4,000 books and recommend 600 for different age groups. The work divides 28 librarians, teachers, authors and parents and 28 young reviewers (aged 7 to 15) from all over the country who have a common passion for books. Today, the committee releases a new edition of the Year's Best Children's Books, which costs $8, and awards two more prizes: - for a book in which young people deal in a positive and realistic way with difficulties and grow emotionally and morally - Gina Willner-Pardo for figuring out Frances (Houghton Mifflin, $14). We are talking about a 10-year-old girl who is trying to find out the boys, her mother and grandfather, who has Alzheimer's disease. For readers from 8 to 12. - For Best Book of Poetry - Sonia Sones for Stop Pretending: What Happened When My Older Sister Went Crazy (HarperCollins, $14.95). It's about dealing with the older sister's mental illness. For readers from 12 to 14. For more information, call 212-8754540 or www.bankstreet.edu/bookcom. Read more often...
