Tears of a tiger study guide p. 1-22 answers

~~Дейк~~thank you/1077 фукцѝап; turn now After Andy and his buddies win their high school basketball game, they go out to celebrate... Grabbing a couple of beers. That's when Andy runs into the car wall and when BJ, Tyrone and Andy all on their friend Robbie's. He wakes up just in time to feel the car burst into flames, and he screams for his friends to help him, but they can't because the door is jammed. Yikes, what are you going to do? Although he received a two-year suspended sentence and must take a couple of DUI classes, Andy doesn't feel like he's actually been punished for what he did. He blames himself for Robbie's death. He talks about it with his coach and tells him Robbie wouldn't have blamed him, but it doesn't help much; Andy is still haunted by the guilt. Pretty soon, Andy's going to be playing basketball again. Now that Robbie's no longer on the team, Andy's taking his place as team captain. Everybody's going to get back to how things were before the accident - well, everybody but Andy, that's it. He can't wrap up his schoolwork anymore, and he doesn't care if he lives or dies. One day, when he's out with his girlfriend Keisha, he's almost jumping into incoming traffic until he stops her. He's his rock, and he doesn't know what he'd do without him. Andy's parents send him to a therapist who tells Andy that it's okay to feel depressed about something traumatic and encourages him to contact Robbie's parents. Reluctantly, Andy writes them a letter reminding them of all the good times he had with Rob. Rob's mother is completely moved by the letter and tells Andy he'll never forget it. It's a lovely reaction, but Andy wishes he died in a car accident instead of Rob. His parents don't care enough to come to their games so Robbie's do-they're always supportive, no matter what-plus Keisha gets fed up with Andy's stomach and leaves him. It's clear he cares a lot about her, but he just can't stand his mood swings all the time. Looks like he got nowhere else to turn. Andy stays home from school and commits suicide. If Andy's friends find out he's dead, they're heartbroken. It's one thing to lose Robbie in an accident, but at least nobody wanted it to happen. Andy's death, however, was on purpose. Some of his gang calls him a coward; others wish to have been contacted for assistance; Keisha can't believe she's gone. His little brother Monty visits his grave and tells him that now he's known that it's okay to cry, even He wants to be big and tough like Andy. Join today and never see them again.
