For lack of desktop 'mode' and scant number of applications, Canonical also recognizes that some areas of use have yet to be resolved before Ubuntu is really ready to work as a true android alternative. In short: Ubuntu's mobile efforts have come a long way since the project was first officially announced at the beginning of the year, but they are still nowhere near where they should be if Canonical is interested in seriously competing in the mobile ambitions, still looking forward to Ubuntu on your mobile device or not? Is your Android Home Screen Getting A Little Crowded? You've probably installed a ton of useful apps and run out of space. However, there are probably apps that you use more often than others. There is an elegant way to treat a crowded home screen. The free app called Bar Launcher lets you add app shortcuts to the notification tray on the state rack on your Android device. To install Bar Launcher, tap the Play Store icon on your home screen. Search Bar Launcher in the Play Store and tap Store on the app page. Once installed, tap Open to open the app from your home screen if you've chosen in the Play Store settings to add a shortcut to your home screen, or from the app drawer. To add an app shortcut, tap the plus button in the bottom right corner of the screen. Scroll through the list of apps and tap the app you want to add to the notification bar. Once you choose the app, it will be added to the bar Launcher main screen. To add another app, tap the Plus button again and select the app you want. You can change the order of apps by touching and holding the app and sliding it up or down. To remove the app from the list, swipe it both ways. NOTE: Don't forget to activate Bar Launcher You can Bar Launcher on your device to get back on the Home screen. Now that you swipe down the left side of the status bar, the apps you choose are displayed on the notification bar. Read on to find out how to do it. Back at the Launcher Bar, touch touch button (3 vertical dots) in the top right corner and then touch Settings. The Settings screen lets you determine if the Bar Launcher icon appears in the state line, changes the app's priority/position on the state line, and changes the color of the arrow (to access other series of apps we'll discuss later). If you turn off the Icon check box, this will remove the badge from the state bar. NOTE: If you decide to hide the Bar Launcher badge in a space, the icon is hidden, but there is an empty space in its place. Priority lets you specify where the app bar is placed in the notification tray at the state rack. The maximum priority is to place the app bar at the top of the notification tray at the state rack. The maximum priority is to place the app bar at the top of the notification tray at any time. If you want the app bar to be below current notifications, choose Normal Priority. To place the app bar below current notifications, choose Normal Priority. To place the app bar below current notifications to a lighter color, you can choose Black. If you want to add a lot of apps to the app line, you can add more lines. To add a string to the app line, you can add more lines. To add a string to the app line, you can add more lines. To do this, tap the menu icon in the top right corner and tap Add a string. Enter the name for the new line in the Add Row dialog box and tap OK. After adding a line, the menu becomes available so you can choose a line. Touch the name of the new series. Use the plus button to add apps, as described above, to the chosen line. You
