The second half of the third season of Superhero will begin on July 2. But in case you forget where things stand in the series, here are all the characters, storylines and unanswered questions you should know for season 3. Justice Forever Young Justice centers around a team of young heroes in the DC Universe. Serving as a secret unit of the Justice League, the group consists of former pals and legacy heroes. The original team included Robin, Kid Flash, Superboy, Aqualad, Miss Martian and Artemis. The first season of the series was dedicated to those six teenagers who got acquainted with the great universe of DC and worked to help uncover a villainous conspiracy called Light, led by Vandal Savage. Even in subsequent seasons shook up the status quo, these six have always remained at the forefront of the series. Start now Each season also includes a major time miss, allowing new heroes to take on roles in the team. The second season showed a five-year pass. Robin was now Nightwing, Superboy and Miss Martian were in a serious relationship and Aqualad seemingly betrayed the team. Six young heroes - along with new team members who have joined over the past five years - were able to stop the alliance between The Light and the alien armada known as Reach. Although the world was saved from Reach technology, which threatened the planet, it came at the obvious cost of kid flash life. Outsiders Two years passed the events of Young Justice: Aqualad took on the title of Aquaman, Aquaman, officially joined the Justice League. Superboy and Miss Martian live a quiet life on a farm near Happy Harbor, the team's original base. Nightwing and Artemis (now a tigress) still work as superheroes and track the meta-trafficking ring in the European nation of Markovia. There they discover two new potential recruits. First, the Crown Prince of Markov, Brion, who, as it turned out, is a meta-gene. It is capable of terrestrial manipulation, allowing it to warm the ground in lava. They also meet the amnesia of a young woman Artemis calls Halo, which has many powers based on the spectrum of light. The team takes in both of them and gives them a house along with Superboy and Miss Martian. Meanwhile, a native of New Genesis, known as Goger, returns to Earth after being banished from his clan. He quickly joined their team. A fourth man soon ends up living in the house as well: Vic Stone, known as Cyborg. Transformed by his father's experiments with an alien device known as Father Box, he became a half-human/half robot. Initially unable to control himself and an evil presence in the Father's Box, he is eventually cured by Halo. What's happened so far is the first half of Young Justice: Outsiders is divided into a series of plots. One of the most significant of them focuses on the newest members of the team. Halo and Brion (who gets the nickname superhero Geo-Force) slowly fall in love while they train to use their powers. However, Brion is also keen for him to find his sister, Tara. She was taken away because of her meta gene, and Bryon spends most of the first half of the season trying to get the team to save her. Halo also reveals the source of her powers: She is actually the soul of The Mother Box, inhabiting the human body. This explains the wide range of powers and hints at its huge potential. Meanwhile, the Justice League is facing crises both inside and outside the country. The league stretches thin, helping the planets around the galaxy in their various wars. Many of the kidnapped teens from the meta-gene trade ring have been used as child soldiers in these battles throughout space. Constantly hampered by the home of Lex Luthor (who managed to become UN Secretary General), Batman leads many members of the league and the team to officially resign. This gives the group the opportunity to return to full vigilance status. They will not be accountable to the law, but will also not have any of the protections that come with it. What the heroes do not know is how far the Light is willing to go to complete his conquest. They even started working with Apokolips, which led to many Darkseid agents making their presence known on Earth. Glorious Godfrey attended almost the entire series, appearing as a cable news personality who refers to superheroes. The sooner The season also introduced Grandma Good, who was posing courtesy of the children's entertainment CEO. Her Goode glasses, an inexpensive VR headset, has been proven to attempt to take over minds around the world. Beast Boy and his power connection with the mystical plane kept him from brainwashing his glasses. The team now knows about the plot against the planet, and the League knows what kind of war they have on their hands. What should happen next Last mission of previously released episodes saw the League target all meta-genes trading bases. In the process, the team managed to save Tara. Every operation carried out by the League is successful, and the meta-gene of the teenage trafficking ring stops. Nightwing even believes that recruits may be ready to officially join the team. The gap between Batman's outsiders and the Justice League also, as it turned out, was made. In fact, the League and the Batman group are simply staging a fight in order to appear weaker than their enemies. However, the threats will still await Earth. The full scope of Darksade's plans with Wandal Savage is still unknown. Grandma Of Good is not captured and G. Gordon Godfrey is still active, meaning the gods apokolips are still very much moving against the planet. Light is also still scheming against the characters. It turned out that they are even well aware of the secret personalities of the characters and, more importantly, about the identity of their families. Ocean Master even almost killed them all before Shiva kept him from starting a direct war with the Justice League. The final moments of the season show that the League of Shadows (led by Deathstroke and Lady Shiva) now has a spy in the ranks of heroes: Tara. Referring to her most famous storyline, The Judas Contract, Tara appears to be a spy working on Deathstroke to infiltrate the team. The first 13 episodes from Young Justice: Outsiders are available to stream on the DC Universe. The series will return for the second half of Season 3 on Tuesday, July 2. The new episodes will continue to premiere on Tuesdays throughout the summer.
