I called 1-800 and they helped me place the order. I got a call on the day of our event to confirm everything and check the order, delivery time and address. The delivery man was on time and helped set everything THe's food was good but I would advise ordering more than you think you would need. We ordered food for over 60 people and only had about 55 and ran out of food. The Macaroni Romano Grill Nutrition in Columbia, MD. I bought a family style serving birthday which I gave to my. Having ordered the right amount of food for the number of people attending, I became concerned that I would not have enough food. The pans look very small and there was a review that said the food wasn't adequate. Nothing could be worse than not having enough food. So before the event I decided to add to my order. Everything I've added is really left. Here's my initial order for 25 people - 2 containers of chicken marsala, two containers of aubergine parmesean and two salads, one caesar and one insalata blu. Chicken marsala and eggplant dishes both come with pasta. If I had left it on this, it would have been the perfect amount. I added two containers of chicken marsala, one extra salad and a new pasta dish of penne. All three items I added were left, plus we had the salad left anyway - at least one whole bowl. The food, at least, was absolutely amazing! Everyone commented on how good it was. The service was great. I highly recommend using Macaroni Grill. I could have saved myself about $200 if I hadn't over ordered. But you live and study. And only two chicken marsals alone wouldn't be enough.... so I really made it perfect by having eggplant in addition to chicken. Prior to the event, the service we received from Macaroni Grill was PERFECT! However, on the day of the actual event, the only disappointment of our wedding was the food. The presentation was so poor as the hostess, I was very, very confused! The salad was served and... but when our guests went to the buffet... Disastrous! The food was like a smoot and the portions were so scarce it looked like we had sent our guests into the ration line. We chose two entrees for our guests. Each guest had to be served both... but the servers asked what they would like. I was in the first group to be served, so I asked the waiters not to ask this question, but my guests told me that they were actually asked what entree they would like. My portion was about half a cup of food... my husband didn't even get a piece of chicken with his portion of Chicken Scallopini... so here we had a large white dinner plate with about 1/2 cup of food on it. At the time It was delicious... just like in a restaurant. The presentation was terrible! We ordered food for 150 and we had 146 guests present... Teh Teh rabies part.... At the end of the night I neatly packed and set to go 7 very large containers of food.... I don't want leftovers! I want well-fed guests. We were told we would have plenty of bread... It's so delicious! Well, we had one piece on the man who was served with salad. We had many guests asking for more bread... but they were told he was gone. The day after the wedding some of my best friends unfortunately told me that by the time they were served the food wasn't even warm... as I though back to the buffet line, I realized that they actually keep the lids off the whole dishes! Every guest I asked the day after the wedding said the food was delicious but wasn't enough of it and it wasn't very attractively placed on their plates. So.. Summing up the line... not sure I'll ever do it again! I ordered family style food for other parties I gave and it was amazing. Always order a penne or pasta bow tie as opposed to a hair corner (we had chicken scallopini and portofino shrimp... they cut the angel's hair into small pieces and mixed the dish all togeher... it's disgusting!). We served a funny snack after a wedding dance... the guest devoured that up. they were very, very hungry!
