CEOP works to keep children safe from sexual abuse and sexual grooming online. It could be from someone they know personally, or someone they have only ever met online. If you believe your child is in danger right now, please call 999. Electronic security: where to start? The Internet has changed our lives, especially our children. For parents and guardians it opens up a whole new world of things to be aware of. For many of us, it can all be too much. You can also think how I can be a good parent online as I am offline? The ThinkuKnow website is really helpful and aims to make online parenting simple and offers a lot of practical advice and simple recommendations. GOTO: www.thinkuknow.co.uk Social Network Protection Guidelines for Parents NSPCC Pure Aware provides a guide for parents on social networking sites, apps and games that children use and how to keep their children

This is the NC-17 (No One 17 or Under Admitted) list of NC-17 or Under Admitted films originally by the Association for Classification and Rating (CARA). Headlines with surrendered ratings are usually released by unretheding to avoid the stigma of NC-17. Some films are released without an MPAA rating because the director expects NC-17. (quote is necessary) Rating changes are due to the re-subscription or appeal of the film's producers. Films receiving NC-17 are often cut out and re-presented in the hope of getting an R rating that allows distribution to more outlets than the NC-17 rating. However, there are some exceptions: for example, in 2004, Fox Searchlight Pictures released The Dreamers with an NC-17 rating; this film grossed $2.5 million in its theatrical release in the United States, a respectable result for a specialized film with a target audience. In the same year, Sony Pictures Classics released Bad Education with an NC-17 rating; he grossed $4.6 million in the United States theatrically, and Focus was very pleased with the theatrical release of the film. In addition, in 2013, Blue Is the Warmest Color was released with an NC-17 rating, and in total it took more than 19 million dollars. NC-17 films also tend to have more box office in the domestic media market. For example, Showgirls became one of the top 20 MGM bestsellers of all time, and Lust, Caution brought in more than $18 million from DVD rentals in the U.S. Sometimes an R-rated film was reclassified as NC-17, although no edits were made: The 1969 Sam Peckinpah film Wild Bunch, originally rated R, was re-introduced by Warner Bros. in 1993 before the expected release of the retun; to their surprise, he was assessed by NC-17, delaying re-release while the decision was appealed. Some titles include reasons for the rating of the R particular film; a few years later he started giving reasons for all movie ratings. The NC-17 rating was created in 1990 instead of the X rating (Cook, Thief, His Wife and her lover, Tie Me Up! Tie Me Down!, life is cheap... But toilet paper is expensive, and LeatherFace: The Texas Chainsaw Massacre III were all given X ratings this year). The movies on this list have either been edited to get the R and/or NC-17 rating surrendered. A few retained the rating for theatrical or DVD release. It's a dynamic list and may never be able to meet specific fullness standards.
