June, 1978 Garfield is a fictional cat and protagonist of comics of the same name, created by Jim Davis. A comic center at Garfield, portrayed as a lazy, fat, and cynical orange Persian/tabby cat. He is known for his love of lasagna and sleeping, and his hatred Monday, fellow cat Nermal and exercise. The character of Garfield's fictional biography, as shown on the back cover of Garfield at Large. Garfield was born (1978-06-19)June 19, 1978, in the kitchen of Mamma Leoni's Italian restaurant. As a kitten, he develops a taste for lasagna that would become his favorite dish. [3] Due to his appetite, owner Mamma Leoni's must choose between keeping Garfield or closing his restaurant; so Garfield's sold to a pet store. Garfield is taken from the Jon Arbuckle store on August 19, 1978. In his cartoon appearances, Garfield usually causes mischief in every episode. In June 1983, the comics introduced Amoeba Man, one of Garfield's alter-egos, but he was pictured in just six stripes (June 20-25). In February 2010, another alter ego was introduced called Super Garfield, and his sidekick Odieboy (Odie). Amoeba Man and Super Garfield are just two of his few imaginary alter egos though, his most common one being Caped Avenger. And for a very short time in 2001-02, Garfield would become prey to an overweight dog provided different identities (e.g. Bungee Dog, Trapdoor Dog, Warm-Up Dog, etc.) that would appear out of nowhere and beat him in any direction. This is also due to the fact that Garfield uses sandboxes occasionally, as in one strip in 1978; says he hates ads because they are too long to sit and too short to trip to the sandpit. On October 27, 1979, it turned out that he did not like raisins. [5] His birthday is June 19, 1978, the day the first Garfield Strip was published. [6] [7] [8] For Garfield, 25. interaction with its 1978 version. Garfield often gets into many adventures, such as getting stuck in roll-up shades, wrestling with mice, and getting locked in animal shelters. In 2005, Garfield and Jon appeared in several Blondie comics in honor of their 75th [9] Garfield was thrilled because he didn't have to think. [10] There was previously a Blondie crossover on garfield's belt published April 1, 1997 and vice versa, as part of the switcheroo comic book. [11] Garfield was one of many cartoon characters featured in the 1990 animated special Cartoon All-Stars to the Rescue. The personality of Garfield is an overweight anthropomorphic orange tabby known for his laziness, smuggler's sarcasm, and intense passion for food, especially lasagna, pizza and ice cream. During the belt, Garfield's weight is often the subject of mocking, especially his talking electronic scale. Garfield usually doesn't handle insults or commands out of range (or anyone else) very well, and will normally respond to such remarks with violence or a comeback of some type. Garfield lives with his slightly eccentric, socially awkward owner Jon Arbuckle and Jon's unintelligent pet dog Odie, and has satirically teased them. He particularly likes causing Odie physical harm or insulting him, and irritates Jon for his social awkwardness and unpopularity with women. Despite this, Garfield takes care of Odie and Jon, but takes care most of his beloved teddy bear Pooky, who is often seen in his arms or near his owner. Jim Davis named Garfield after his grandfather James Garfield Davis. Garfield graffiti in Chełmno, Poland In the first two films Garfield, Garfield: The Movie and Garfield: The Tail of Two Kittens, Garfield was created using computer animation, although the films were otherwise mainly live-action. Inches In the films, Garfield's design has been changed to narrowly favor the real cat in both looks and motion, though his facial features remain exaggerated and expressive bearing a slight resemblance to his voice by actor Bill Murray. Fully animated films Garfield Gets Real, Garfield Fun Fest and Garfield's Pet Force also depict Garfield with computer animation, but the design used in them is much closer to his original comic book design than the first two films'. In prime-time specials and animated series Garfield and Friends, Garfield was voiced by Lorenzo Music. In live action movies, he is voiced by Murray. Both actors also shared the role of Dr. Peter Venkman, who Murray starred in Ghostbusters and voiced in the animated TV series The Real Ghostbusters. At the start of the second season of Real Ghostbusters, music was replaced by Dave Coulier after Murray complained that the music's voice as Venkman and how Garfield were largely indistinguishable. In Garfield Gets Real and CGI series The Garfield Show, he is voiced by Frank Welker, who previously voiced multiple characters in segments of Garfield's US Acres and Friends, and was understudy for music. Garfield was licensed by Dakin to create cuddly toys around 1988. Garfield has been the mascot of Kennywood, a traditional theme park in West Mifflin, Pennsylvania near Pittsburgh since the 1990s. The ride to Kennywood, Garfield's nightmare, was created with exclusive input from Garfield's creator, Jim Davis. Reference ^ Garfield is a boy ... Transport?
