Remind is a communication platform for teachers and students to talk to each other. Web software also has several useful features, such as sharing files and translating messages. This platform is designed for both offline and online teachers. As a teacher, you can send schedules, photos, files or even quizzes through messages to all students. Remind acts as a social network for educational purposes. Professors can easily contact their students as well as their parents without having to request personal phone numbers or emails. The website can also tell you if all your students have received your message or if someone is missing it. Educators start by creating a class that can function as a group in certain social networks, this is where teachers message everyone in the classroom. The platform also allows you to send private messages to a student or his parents. This makes educational resources such as Powerpoint lessons accessible to each participant. Parents can also see your messages. All documents, spreadsheets, and other files are available under the Files tab for everyone in the class to access. Integrated Platforms and Other Features Educational Platform also supports other resources to help you with class abilities. This includes a Google class that provide students with course jobs and their grades. You can also use a monkey quiz and review for exercise or after-school activities. Another way to recall can help you is the translation feature. You can translate any posts on the site into some of the most commonly used languages, such as Spanish, French and Korean. This can help you understand what your students can say. It also allows you to communicate with people who can only speak a particular language. Where can you run this program? The Remind website is available through any browser. You can also use a mobile phone app that is compatible with android 4.4 or better phones, as well as iOS 10.0 and up. Is there a better alternative? A good alternative to Remind is Twiducate. A social media app that provides a private platform for both teachers and students. The app is compatible with Google Docs and YouTube. Remind fulfills its goal of providing you and your students with a social media platform for effective messaging and sharing. It also goes beyond its function with integrating other websites and platforms such as Google Docs. You can also contact international students or teachers with Remind. The only limitation of the site is the 140-character limit, which is similar to Twitter, before it doubled the character limit. will you download it? Yes, a free account provides teachers with the tools they need to communicate and provide resources to the class. Good thoughts can come from anywhere, at any time. So can edit your best writing work. Keep the text handy, and ideas are easy to add, with these writing, taking notes and collecting app ideas for Android. It's available almost everywhere, it's reduced to ultimate simplicity, and it constantly saves you work, so you don't have to. This is what Adam calls the Holy Grail of ubiquitous text capture. Two Android customers provide the best Simplenote experience. This author prefers the paid ($2.37-ish) SolidNote, but only because of the slight polish on the controls and seemingly less lag during input. mNote, a free alternative, does just as well as work just by displaying and saving your Simplenote stuff, and maybe you won't experience the same lag. Despite all the cool performance modern technology was born, the holy grail for me... Others have ideas that they should outline, even if only the most elementary forms. For the latest crew, there's Thinking Space, a mind-mapping app for Android that makes it easy to piece together disparate ideas and pull them out later in handy form-image files, via email, however you need them. Thinking Space for Android AppBrain AK Notepad If Simplenote synchronization is not your thing, and if you're a fan of the yellow-legal-style iPhone Notes app, the AK Notepad is probably exactly what you need. It's a simple client note, but it also allows those notes to work in and around your phone. Set reminders to note to ping you later, pin a specific note to your Android home screen, tag notes for search, and back them up on an SD card or Catch.com, the creator of another app on that list. AK Notepad (AppBrain) Evernote and Springpad Than words can enter into a piece of text. Images dictated by notes, web links, and more can be pieces of the puzzle. Evernote is a more established universal capture tool that syncs with almost every available computing platform, and its Android client has just undergone an overhaul, making it a very viable tool. But we also dug in as Springpad popped up while Evernote was still getting its Android base, providing a nicely different alternative. Both tools are free, and make your Android smartphone into a kind of secretary that follows you everywhere, hear your latest thoughts that should end up inside work. iPhone/Android: The previously mentioned web service Springpad is a great web laptop and ... (aa_editors_tip) This is a list of applications for drinking water as people. If you are here looking for an app to remind you to water your plants, we recommend our best gardening apps for the Android list! (aa_editors_tip) Most people don't need an app for drinking water. We just don't go through it much in a day. However, there are some people who could definitely use the water reminder app. There are people who hike or exercise a lot where water consumption is important. There is no ton of variance in this space on a mobile phone. These apps remind you to take drinks at regular intervals and track how much you have consumed. It's simple, simple, and most apps don't mess it up. Here are the best water reminder apps for Android! Hydro - Water Drink Reminder Price: Free/$2.99 Hydro is a totally serviceable water reminder app, and it's a good place to start this list. The app includes what we consider to be the main functions. These features include a water demand calculator to see how much water you really need. It also comes with reminders, water-tracking diagrams, cloud backup support, cross-device synchronization, and support for about ten languages. The premium version removes ads and provides additional backup options. It looks good and it worked well in our testing. We can't ask for much more than that. Jump Fitness Drink Water Reminder Price: Free/$2.99 Leap Fitness has a bunch of fitness apps on Google Play. One is a water reminder app. This is another app that all we imagine you need in an app like this. It tracks your water intake, reminds you to drink more water, and you can see your drinking history. It also has synchronous support for Google Fit, Samsung Healthcare and creating an account through Google. It also has a backup and options from the cloud. It uses a material design and is easy to use. As a Hydro, we can't find anything really wrong with it, and all the features work well. The premium version goes for $2.99 as an in-app purchase. Water Time Price: Free/Up $2.99 Water Time is a quirky water reminder app with an adorable little mascot. He does the basics for sure. You can track how much water you drink each day and get reminders to drink water if you slack. It shows you how much you need to drink during the day and actually warns you to stop if you drink too much. It also tracks coffee and tea consumption as well, and we liked that extra tracking feature. It does not track your daily, weekly or monthly statistics very well at the time of writing (October 21, 2018). However, some developers feedback from Google Play reviews promises that feature in future update. This update should add a much needed boost to an otherwise perfectly enjoyable app. The to-do list app works too Price: The Free/Varies A list of apps is a worthy way to remind yourself to drink more water. It obviously doesn't have the tracking function of some of these other apps. However, this is a good solution for those who don't need or want to track every ounce of (or ML) of water, but still want to make sure they drink more. TickTick, Todoist, and Microsoft To-Do are great options in this space, but there are many others. We have our best to-do list of apps linked to the button above if you want to see these options. All of them support repetitive tasks, so adding a reminder to drink water every day shouldn't be too much of a deal. In addition, they can help organize your life in other ways too. Google Assistant and similar reminder app Price: Free/Varies Reminder apps may actually be better for this than to-do list apps. Reminder apps provide quick reminders for different tasks throughout the day. They're not as heavy as the to-do list apps, and let's face it, it's a list of water reminder apps, not a list of water apps. Either way, Google Assistant has a reminder feature if you want to go down the personal assistant route. Google Keep has reminders, like life reminders and reminders of life. As a to-do list option, we will have our best reminder apps connected up on the button above if you want to see the best of the best. They are usually free with different costs.
