The couple's first dance together means their union and helps set the style and tone of the celebration. It is perfectly normal for a happy couple to choose a song with personal meaning that is not a flashy romantic ballad. If it's a romantic show-stopper, however, your guests are much more likely to be charmed. These 10 first dance wedding songs don't necessarily pour into romance and drama, but they will deliver the goods when it comes to creating an important, touching moment on the dance floor - even if you have two left feet. We'll start the countdown with a fairly memorable song on the next page, and we'll share a few of the first dance samples nominated by Say Yes fans in a dress on Facebook. Advertising content written by Irving Gordon and popular in 1951 by Nat King Cole, this slow, sweet number was updated in 1991 by Cole's daughter Natalie for her album Unforgettable: With Love. Through the sorcery of modern sound mixing, she sings a song in a duet with her deceased father. There are a number of other treatments available from different artists, but these two are unforgettable. Advertising the Grammy winner in 1991 for best pop vocal performance by a male artist, Michael Bolton remakes this popular 1966 Percy Sledge melody drama, power and sex appeal. You can find it on Bolton's album, Time, Love and Tenderness. While this song is playing, the groom will look like a romantic hero, and the bride will be the perfect focus of his adoration. Advertising If your trip down the aisle has been a long way, you're still one might be perfect for your first wedding dance. It's a celebration to make it through hard times on the other side. From Shania Twain's album Come On Over, You're Still the One was a monster crossover hit for her that could bring some subtle country atmosphere to your reception. Advertising written in 1946 for the musical St. Louis Woman, it's Harold Arlen, Johnny Mercer's collaboration is sexy and sassy. Many artists recorded the song Come Rain or Come Shine. Aside from the classic version of Ray Charles, check out the acronyms of Ella Fitzgerald, Barbra Streisand, Bette Midler, Frank Sinatra and more. Feel the warmth as you dance to this classic. Advertising If you're a fan of Elvis Presley, (and who's not), then this 1961 love song from the album Blue Hawaii is a great choice for this first foray on the dance floor as husband and wife. Can't Help Falling in Love is one of Elvis's most enduring romantic ballads, and with it he often concluded his concerts. For you trivia lovers, the melody is a tribute to the French song, Plaisir d'Amour. Advertising Why the melody is relaxed? Unchained Melody was originally written for the 1955 film Unchained about prisoners ending with their sentences and hoping their loved ones are still outside for them. Rendered sizzling hot and sensual Demi Moore and Patrick Swayze in the movie Ghost, Unchained Melody is a steamy choice whether you have a potter's wheel or not. Advertising Written by Stephanie Bentley and Holly Lamar, this country-west is the new favorite title cut from the 1999 album Faith Hill Breathe. Chocolate sweet and fun to dance, it is female vocals with the sensitivity of the country, which still manages to sound sophisticated, curvy and just a little naughty. If you want to add a little western flair to your reception, it will be perfect. Advertising How Sweet It Is reached No. 6 in the rhythm and blues charts when it was originally recorded by Marvin Gaye in 1964. In 1975, James Taylor made it into pop and easily listened to the hit with the help of his then wife, Carly Simon, singing backup. If you don't want your reception to become too sentimental, this one is the winner. It's a fun, energetic, knock-clicking room. Advertising a very romantic tribute that will make that first dance special, You're So Beautiful was a collaboration between Billy Preston and Bruce Fisher. There may have been a third participant. Rumor has it that the Beach Boys' own Dennis Wilson also helped craft the song. But, no one forgot Joe Cocker's from the key, but moving, treating the melody. Advertising What could be more ideal for the first dance song than At Last, a 1961 rhythm and blues classic performed by Etta James? If your love finally comes along and your lonely days are over, this is for you. Written by Mack Gordon and Harry Warren in 1941, At Last became a big hit for the Glen Miller Orchestra back in 1942.
