Imagine waking up one morning and opening Instagram to find that all the people you've followed since downloading the app have mysteriously been unfollowed. Sounds like a scary scenario, doesn't it? Well, on since yesterday, it was the reality of Kim Kardashian West. On Wednesday night, fans noticed that the star was suddenly not following any, including all members of her family, close friends and brands she has worked with for years. People couldn't help but wonder what happened and if the scandal was involved, but it turns out Kardashian West has about as good an idea as we are. The KKW Beauty founder took to Twitter to express her confusion and disappointment about the situation, writing: OMG what???? What is going on???? She also posted an Instagram Story, explaining that she has no idea what happened and that she is going to do her best to remember everyone she has followed before adding them back. And she shut down rumors that she went for a removal spree, tweeting: Nothing! We're working to figure out what happened, but I'll start keeping an eye on people if I remember everyone. //twitter.com/KimKardashian/status/1121249429879549952But it seems the mother-of-three is having trouble adding people back. I tried to follow people again and now looks like at 0 again, she tweeted early Thursday morning. However, for now, it seems she has been able to follow 53 people, including some of her closest friends and family, and of course KKW Beauty. There is still no explanation as to what happened or how, but we expect Instagram to investigate the incident and will report when it has an answer. Now more on Reading? Now watch Shay Mitchell try nine things she's never done before: Calvin Harris and Taylor Swift. Miley Cyrus and Demi Lovato. Justin Bieber and Selena Gomez. Most of us will unfollow someone on Instagram or Twitter because of incessant selfies or boring reflections on life, and this move will go unnoticed. But, in La La Land, tactical unfollow never goes undiscovered and therefore sends the rumor mill into overdrive about whether the decision proves a high-profile bust-up or decay. This content is imported from a third party. GIPHY's 'unfollow' in Hollywood is pretty much just like a celebrity holding a big sign on his forehead on the red carpet that reads: It's all over. So, imagine our shock when we heard Rihanna not so secretly unfollowed Jennifer Lopez on Instagram, according to E! News. I know, don't I? Shock to horror. Getty Images Big Deal. Maybe RiRi just wasn't a fan of Jenny's music block anymore? Maybe Rihanna thought it was a good idea to watch the Lopez Gigli movie over the Christmas holidays and soon realized that she would never get those two hours back in life?', you cry. Well, there are no friends of mine, because we have a funny feeling that the decision to unfollow J.Lo stems from the news that Drake - known as the man who earlier this year professed his undying love for RiRi - was seen on numerous fore-outs with the maid in the Manhattan star and decided to go public with his new romance. Getty Images It all started two weeks ago when Lopez posted a photo of her cosy-up dance star on Instagram and wrote the caption: 'Look who rolled up to my show tonight to say hello! @champagnepapi #lovehim #ilovegas #ALLIHAVE'. But, now it looks like Drake's friendship and J.Lo has been stepped up a notch after the pair posted an intimate snap to their Instagram account earlier today that sees them snuggling towards each other. This content is imported from Instagram. You can find the same content in a different format, or you may be able to find more information on your website. To be fair, we were never quite sure about the relationship status of Rihanna and Drake, given that Rihanna was relentlessly shy about her pair of dalliances and Drake's father Dennis Graham spoke out earlier this summer to say that the couple were just friends, but we were holding out for a reunion between the pair. After all, Drake is Ryri's lobster. This one You can find the same content in a different format, or you may be able to find more information on your website. via GIPHY But, while news news Drake's blossoming romance with J.Lo may have had our heads in the back, it seems (agram, despite the unfollow) Rihanna has enjoyed one life lately; Hang out with Prince Harry in Barbados, promoting her FENTYxPUMA fashion line and working on her upcoming film, Ocean's Eight. Getty Images quoting Mean Girls: I would like to bake a cake filled with rainbows and smiles, and everyone will eat and be happy... There's no point in losing a friendship with a boy, RiRi. You may be able to find more information about this and similar content on the piano.io Tony partyseekers trapped at the Fyre Festival were far from the only cheated people behind Jerry's media. A social media agency tasked with promoting that doomed event has been derailing jokes by comedians for years and pedaling them like original content to its ridiculously popular Instagram account, FuckJerry. But maybe not much longer, at least if Meg Wright has something to say about it. Wright, the editor of Vulture, who specializes in comedy, has recently been on a crusade to crush Jerry's media, in support of comedians who don't profit from stolen jokes. It started with a well-argued piece on Vulture screaming Comedy Central for advertising their show FuckJerry to 14.3 million Instagram followers. There's just something about advertising on an Instagram account that has been successful for posting stolen jokes, and spending money on advertising to run sponsored posts stylized as stolen jokes, no less, that feels like the anti-socialism all Comedy Central stands for, especially given that the network probably uses comedians and writers who had their jokes stolen by FuckJerry at some point,' she wrote. Jerry's media seems to be thriving, the Fyre Festival debacle being damned. (The agency actually produced a Netflix documentary about the festival that feels like a metatextual scam.) But what is missing from the pushback against the brand is the organization. After a positive response to her piece, Wright began #FuckFuckJerry on Twitter. This I'm too optimistic, but the value of FuckJerry is their 14.3m IG followers. If some celebrities with tons of IG followers posted a message urging their fans to unfollow and inspired a boycott, maybe a dent could be made in that 14.3m. - Meg Wright (@megh_wright) January 25, 2019 She looked at some of the most famous comedians and comedians following FuckJerry, and started tweeting on asking to consider an unfollowing joke thief thief Wright enlisted the support of Patton Oswalt, Tim Heidecker, and hilarious video artist Vic Berger, the latter of whom chimed in with an unflattering story about the fight against FuckJerry. In 2016, #FuckJerry and their chief content officer James Ryan Ohliger aka Krispys shorts stole a bunch of my videos and posted their own with ads attached. Here's Ohliger's answer after I called them on @instagram. #FuckFuckJerry

pic.twitter.com/aUqzNtluMV - Vic Berger IV (@VicBergerIV) January 30, 2019C a large number of movement supporters tweeting from Wright's article and using the hashtag #FuckFuckJerry, many other comedians have joined the fray as well. Here are just a few of them. It's a #FuckFuckJerry - Paul F. Tompkins (@PFTompkins) January 30, 2019 What @megh_wright makes it great. She encourages people to unfollow FuckJerry on Instagram. FuckJerry stole from me and many other comedians, and they were unre pakistani. You may not realize how bad they are. Please unfollow that account right now. - Jake Weissman (@weismanjake) February 1, 2019 Fuck Jerry steals content from Fight Comics (who put it for free) and then uses it to make money from selling ads. If you don't want to help rich dudes make money by stealing from people who don't grow rich enough to work in the system, then UNFOLLOW them. #fuckfuckjerry - Eliza Skinner (@elizaskinner) February 1, 2019 Ugh, content thieves are a comedy herpes #FuckFuckJerry - Nia Vardalos (@NiaVardalos) February 1, 2019 #FuckFuckJerry @megh_wright. I somehow still like 100 mutual followers with this thieving account that monetizes other people's jokes without credit - including fuckin' my! So please don't follow. And fuck @FATJEW, but it's another day. - Chase Mitchell (@ChaseMit) February 1, 2019 #FuckFuckJerry and fuck all the talentless assholes who take the work of other artists and post it as their own. - Anthony Atamanuik (@TonyAtamanuik) February 1 #fuckfuckjerry, 2019. - Guy Branum (@guybranum) January 31, 2019 Instagram account/media company FuckJerry made a fortune stealing jokes from comedians and using them as a basis for selling ads to big brands. #FuckFuckJerry @megh_wright - Adam Conover (@adamconover) January 31, 2019It seems that while he may not eventually topple the Giants, #FuckFuckJerry is really having an impact. In this Twitter thread, Wright reveals that she learned from tipster that the FuckJerry account quietly deleted 260 Instagram posts and lost thousands of followers. In addition, FuckJerry suddenly defended his Instagram account, which famously kind of when everything goes perfectly. If profiting from stolen jokes is something that offends you, there seems to be no better time to consider the unfollowing FuckJerry.UPDATE: Comedy Central has joined the ranks of those unfollowing FuckJerry: FuckJerry:
