Saharam Binder (Sakharam, the Binder) is a play by the playwright Marathi Vijay Tendulkar, first performed in 1972. It was banned in India in 1974. It was produced and directed by Kamlakar Sarang. Synopsis Saharam Binder, the main character, believes that he has a system by the tail, and he can ignore culture and social values as long as he is truthful. This system de facto enslaves women in post-colonial India, despite the promises of democracy and modernity. Saharam, a bookseller, picks up other men thrown out by female castoffs who would otherwise be homeless, dispossessed or killed with impunity, and accepts them as domestic servants and sexual partners. He rules his house like a tin pot tyrant, but every woman says she can leave when she loves. He'll even give her a sari, 50 rupees and a ticket to where she wants to go. Everything is good and right, as far as Saharam Binder is concerned, he says. He is not a husband to forget the common decency. What he does not expect are the moral and emotional complications of this arrangement that prove heartbreakingly disastrous for all involved. Over the decades, Saharam has been played by many actors, including Neil Fule, Sayaji Sinde, Rajiv Nema, Sanjima Sahay and Gitendra Goethe. Adaptation and translations This section needs to be expanded. You can help by adding to it. (April 2015) Since then, the play has been adapted and translated into many Indian languages, including Carnada, Hindi, Bengali and English. It was staged in English, in an off-broadway location, as part of the Theatre Company, a season play company starring Adam Alexi-Malle, Sarita Chowdhury, Anna George, Sanjeev Javeri, Bernard White and director Maria Miliat. It was also included as the final play at the month-long Tendulkar Festival, which took place in New York in 2004. Further reading of five plays by Vijay Tendulkar. (Different Translators). Footloose and fantasy free, Saharam is looking for vulnerable women who have been driven out of the house and promises to give them twice and two sarees instead of home help and sexual services.
