Side 1 with the attic black figure of the neck-amphora, No. 520-510 BC Louvre, the ParisSky map of Homeric Greece Trojan War was one of the most important wars in the history of ancient Greece. It happened between the Trojans and the Greeks. It is mostly known through the Iliad, an epic poem written by the ancient Greek poet Homer. The site of ancient Troy was found, across the Aegean Sea on Asia Minor. The war may have taken place in the 12th century BC. The mythical origins of the War Origins of War (in the Iliad) began at the wedding of King Peleus and the non-raïd (sea nymph) Fetis. They invited almost all the gods to their wedding. But they did not invite Erisa, the goddess of struggle. She became angry and threw a golden apple among the guests, which read To the fairest. Goddess Hera, Athena and Aphrodite caught the apple at the same time and fought for who was the most beautiful. Because they couldn't finish the fight on their own, they went to see zeus, the king of the gods. Zevs chose Paris to decide, and give the apple who he wanted. Each of the three goddesses offered Paris gifts to choose her. Hera offered Paris all of Asia. Athena offered wisdom. Then Aphrodite offered him the love of the most beautiful woman. Paris gave the apple to Aphrodite. Of course, Aphrodite did not think that the most beautiful woman, Elena, the queen of Sparta, already had a husband (King Menelaus Sparta). But Aphrodite had her son, Eros, shoot Helen with a golden arrow so she fell in love in Paris. They went to Troy. Menelaus, Elena's husband, declared war on Troy to take away her queen, now called Elena Troy. This is the beginning of the Trojan War. The modern Turkish version of the Trojan horse Trojan Horse War lasted for ten years swinging to one side and then the other. Some of the leading fighters were Achilles, Paris, and Hector. The Greeks won by building a large wooden horse, which we now call the Trojan Horse. Greek soldiers hid inside the horse, while others put the horse on the shore and left in their boats. The Trojans saw the horse and thought that the Greeks had given up and left. They thought the horse was a gift in their honor. They dragged the horse into Troy and celebrated their victory. When the night fell out, the Greeks, hiding inside the horse, opened the city gates and set fire to houses. The Greeks who in their boats had just pretended to leave to deceive the Trojans. They came back and won the war. The trick was invented by Odysseus, the king of the small island of Ithaca. What actually happened to the Hett empire, circa 1300 BC in light red. A city called Vilus is probably Troy's War probably happened, but in saying the events were exaggerated and mythical elements were added. These changes are in line with the needs of the oral tradition. In the mid-19th century, German archaeologist Heinrich Schliemann discovered the ruins of the city, which he identified as Troy. Some Hittite and Egyptian texts also speak of war. It is said that the confederation of 22 cities went to war. Stories, Books, Movies It's Stories, Books, Movies, etc. that are about the Trojan War, or tell parts of its story: Homer's Iliad, does not tell the story of the Trojan War from the beginning, but only part of the last year of the siege of Troy. Other parts of the war were told in a series of epic poems that survived only fragments. Episodes of war provided material for Greek tragedy and other works of Greek literature, as well as for Roman poets such as Virgil and Ovid. Homer's Odyssey, the main character of Odysseus tells about a ten-year journey home after the Trojan War. Troy, the film about the Trojan War, although the story has changed a lot in parts.
