Untitled Some Might Say Cast No Shadow She's Electric Morning Glory Untitled Champagne Supernova Audio samplefilehelp Champagne Supernova is a song by English rock band Oasis, written by Noel Gallagher. It was released as a single in non-UK countries in 1996, and is the last track on the band's second album (What's the Story) Morning Glory?. The Jam frontman Paul Weller serves as guest guitarist and backing vocalist on the track. The music video for the song, directed by Nigel Dick, was released in 1996. The single was not released in the UK. The song was released in the United States as a radio single with great success, becoming the band's second number 1 single on the Modern Rock Tracks chart. It also peaked at number 20 on the Billboard Hot 100 Airplay, becoming the band's third single on the chart. The song is included in the album of the greatest hits of the group Stop the Clocks and in the American release Time Flies... 1994–2009. Supernova SN 2003fg was nicknamed Champagne Supernova after the song. Von Noel Gallagher said in 2005 that he still hasn't made a decision on what the song is really about, previously told an NME interviewer in 1995: It means different things when I'm in different moods. When I'm in a bad mood, being caught in a landslide is still suffocating. The song is a bit epic. It's about when you're young and you see people in groups and you think about what they've done for you and they've done nothing. As a child, you always believed that Sex Pistols would conquer the world and kill everyone in the process. Groups like Clash just quieted down. Punk rock was supposed to be a revolution, but what did it do? Fuck everything. The Manchester thing would be the greatest move on earth but it was fuck all. When we started, we decided we weren't going to do anything for anyone, we just thought we'd leave a bunch of great songs. But some words about nothing. One is about the Butler bracket that was once on Cumberwick Green or Trumpton or something. He used to take about 20 minutes to go down the hall. And then I couldn't think of anything that rhymed with the hall except the cannonball, so I wrote: Slowly walking down the corridor, faster than And people said, wow, man. There's also a line: Where were you while we were under high profile?, because that's what we always tell each other. But the number of people who have already started clubs called Champagne Supernova is incredible. And the album hasn't even been released yet. In a 2009 interview, Gallagher recounted the following anecdote: This writer, he was talking about the song Champagne Supernova, and he actually said to me, You know, one thing that stops him as a classic is the funny lyrics. And I said, What do you mean? And he said, Well, slowly walking down the hall, faster than the cannonball -- what does that mean? And I said, I don't know. But you tell me when you have 60,000 people singing it, they don't know what that means? It means something different for each of them. The music video for the song was shot by Nigel Dick and filmed at Ealing Studios on February 15 and 16, 1996. The song was played live at most Oasis concerts. Noel Gallagher said: I think it's the only song since it was written that we played every night. During the Morning Glory Tour in 1995/96 and the Be Here Now tour in 1997/98, the ending usually stretched for five minutes, and Noel played a long improvised guitar solo. An example of one of these performances can be seen on DVD ... Here and there. Oasis performed the song at the MTV Video Music Awards in 1996, with vocalist Liam Gallagher making rude gestures towards his brother Noel while he played guitar solo and then spitting beer across the stage before storming. After Noel's abrupt departure from Oasis in August 2009 and the band's subsequent dissolution, Champagne Supernova became the last original song they performed live; The most recent song was a cover of the Beatles' I Am the Walrus, as was the case with most of their concerts. After the Oasis split, the song was performed by Noel Gallagher's band High Flying Birds, followed by Liam Beady Eye, and Liam during his solo career. An alternative version of Brendan Lynch has been hired to create an alternative mix and remix. An alternative blend was eventually released on the Deluxe Edition (What is the Story) Morning Glory? while the remix was released on the B-side on the promo-only 12 Oasis' cover of Slade Cum On Feel Noize. Known as Lynchmob Beats Mix, this remix was re-released on promotional material for the band's greatest hits album Stop the Clocks. Live versions of the track have been released on ... That's where and when we know millions. The clean version, editing the sound effects of the waves at the beginning of the track, was released on Assorted, free Released in the January 1996 edition of no. Retrospective collection 1994-2009. Famous cover versions of the British band Urban Cookie Collective made a dance cover of the song, but Noel Gallagher prevented them from releasing it as a single. American pop-rock band OneRepublic released a cover version as a single in 2017.
