Error code 80004005 As we did our research on Florida, Manatees and Feathers seemed to be a recurring theme. Even if you see them all over Florida, they are a protected species. Therefore, the only place where you can legally swim with the Manatees is to Three Sisters Springs in Crystal River, Florida. And the only way there is either kayaking, paddleboarding or a tour. We decided to rent our kayaks from Hunter Springs Kayaks because we wanted to spend more time exploring the area. STATS: Where:Hunter Springs Kayaks Rental:36 Northeast 4th Street, Counter A, Crystal River, FL 34429Hunter Springs Park: (Launch Point)18 NE 2nd St, Crystal River, FL 34429Three Sisters Springs Coordinates: (Destination) 28°53'17.1N 82°35'22.5W Parking: You can park either in front of Hunter Springs Kayaks for free or in Hunter Park. It's 5 dollars to get into the park. Toilets: There are toilets in hunter springs kayaks and Hunter Springs Park. There are no toilets on the way or in Three Sisters Springs if you kayak there. Distance: About 1.10 km from Hunter Springs Park to the entrance of Three Sisters Springs. 200 metres from the entrance to the springs. Level: Beginner intermediate level. The river is wide and easy to navigate. However, the wind can be a little strong when you are in the open bay, but they seemed to calm down as soon as we entered the waterways. Estimated completion time: You can do this within 3 hours. We did 5 hours because we wanted to spend a lot of time swimming with the sailors. Ideal weather: Dry, quieter days. Ideal time: 15 November - 31 March:This is the Manatee season. The good thing is that there will be tons of human males around spring. The worst thing is that while you can swim indoors depending on the day, you can't paddle into spring. 1 April - 14 November: You will be the members of the Council along the but not within the source. The water along the river is much murkier, so the sailors will not be so clear. However, you can paddle inside the spring. It was very Within. QUICK INFO ABOUT THREE SISTERS SPRINGS: Three Sisters Springs are beautiful, clear, petrol-water springs that are a sanctuary for the sea geese in winter. It is a perfect swimming hole in summer. There are two ways to experience Three Sisters Springs.By Land: You can reach the Promenade of Three Sisters Springs at:601 Three Sisters Springs Trail, Crystal River, Fl. There are no parking spaces there except disabled vehicles. You can either take a trolley, walk or ride a bike in. From here there is no access to water. You can only see the sources from the country. They also do not offer water-based activities. For more information, visit their website. By water: The only ways you can reach Three Sisters Springs on the water are either kayaks, paddleboards, boats or a tour. These tours and rental sits are located in kings Bay. We recommend Hunter Springs Kayaks, at least for your rental. They also offer tours. If you want to swim with the Manatees, you have to go down this path. Manatee Rules & Regulations:These following actions are NOT ALLOWED: Hunting or tracking a manatees. Disturbing or touching a dormant or feeding manatees. Diving from the surface onto a dormant or feeding manatees. Cornering or around a manatee. Ride, hold, grab, pinch, sting, proddingen or sting a manatee with everything, including your hands and feet. Standing on a manatees. Separation of mother and calf or separation of a group of sea geese. Manatees something to eat and drink. Active initiation of contact with strapped/tagged manatees and related equipment, including all belts, belts, tracking devices and antennas. Intervention in rescue and research activities. THE ADVENTURE: It was about 1.5-2 hours drive from Orlando to Crystal River. It wasn't the next of us, but swimming with sailors sounded like a dream come true. Unless you go with a tour group, there is not much information on the internet about how to swim with the Manatees themselves. When we went up to Hunter Springs Kayaks, we still had no idea how we would handle it. When we got in, we were greeted by Mark. When I expressed my concerns, he smiled and told us not to worry. In short, you can pay your rent at the counter. Three hours should be enough, but we recommend five if you want more time to swim with the seapeople. They give you a waterproof card to keep up with you on your ships. Then you need to watch a Manatee Manners video. You must follow all the rules while swimming with the Manatees. Afterwards we made our way to the Hunter Park to pick up our rental apartments. Hunter Springs Park is just a 2-minute walk from the rental office. Mark advised us to park our car in front of her office and go there. It is 5 dollars to park inside the park. Of course, we'd rather save 5 dollars for future adventures. When we came to the park, Mark Mark are waiting for us with our rents. He then went back over paddle etiquette and the directions to get us where we wanted to go. Three Sisters Springs is your destination if you want to swim with the Manatees. If the water in the river is warm, you won't see it in the springs, but you'll see it in the waterways on the way there. During the Manatee season, WHEN spring is open to swimmers, you can drop your anchor and swim in. Be sure to do it slowly if there are Manatees among you. It is illegal to injure these adorable creatures, and you could face fines and/or jail time. After we all settled into our kayaks, Mark helped us push them out. From here you should turn right and head towards the light grey building with a blue roof. Be careful here, as you could find yourself in the way of much larger boats. As soon as you pass the light gray building, you hang a left and head in the direction of the white bridge that crosses the canal, which is only slightly to the left. They will want to go under the bridge. The area between the grey building and the bridge could be windy because you are in the open bay. Luckily, the wind calms as soon as you get under the bridge. Here you can also see tons of fish jumping out of the water. As we approached the bridge, we saw a few kayakers approaching us from the opposite direction. They told us that one or two sailors were hanging right in front of the bridge. Surely we saw their tails fluttering over the water as they went up for air. It was a mother and her baby. They seemed to follow us as we paddled along the canal towards spring. It was adorable to see the little manate baby swimming with his mother. The water here was a bit cloudy, but still clear enough to be seen underwater. If you are not sure where to go at this point, simply follow the tour boats or other paddlers in front of you. The waterways are beautiful with tree-lined banks opposite some beautiful houses on the water. You will know when you come to Three Sister Springs. As soon as we pulled up right in front of it, the water turned from cloudy to super clear with a beautiful teal color. There is a large sign with warnings about what not to do here. From here you can either kayak into the springs if it is not during the manatee season or anchor their ships and swim in. It is about 200 ft swim to the springs. During the Manatee season, it's politics to wear a snorkel/mask & wetsuit while swimming. Since we drove right before the Manatee season we were able to kayak directly into this breathtaking swimming hole. The water here is so clear that you can see up to the ground. I still can't get over how petrol this water is. The temperature was also perfect as it was at a constant 74 degrees. There were a few people in the sources who either from this place, swimming or snorkeling in it. When we tried to figure out how to get out of our kayaks, Jake, a volunteer at Three Sisters Springs, helped us. He spoke to some visitors on the promenade. He told us that we could pull our kayaks onto the rocks and drive from there. As I followed Dustin near the rocks, I heard a little Yelp from him. Apparently, a small water snake swims right next to the rocks to which he has just pulled up. Because the water was so clear, you can see the snake very clearly. Jake said it wasn't toxic, so we weren't worried. The snake also wanted nothing to do with us, as it snakes away from us. Be careful when trying to get on or off the rocks. These rocks are super slippery as they are covered with moss. We wore our water shoes, so it helped. There were no sailors in the spring, but it was such a decent experience to swim and snorkel in the water so clear and brilliant. With Jake's help, Dustin found the spring cook on the front and dived on it. After spending far too long here, we climbed back onto our kayaks and made our way back to the waterways. Dustin decided to see if our manatees were still outside. Certainly there were a few of them this time, grazing around. So we both put our snorkel on again and jumped back into the water. It was such a great feeling to swim with the Manatees. They were busy eating their lunches, so we circled around and made sure they left plenty of space. None of us wanted to leave. But all good things must end. As we said goodbye to these great creatures, we set out on the same path back towards the park. The wind seemed to favor us a little on the way back. We can't wait to go back, maybe during the Manatee season, to have a better view of them. We definitely recommend that you add the manatee to your bucket list. Another unique adventure here in Florida is bioluminescence kayaking or airboat ride. If you want to spend more time with the Manatees near Orlando, visit Blue Spring State Park. Happy Adventuring.
