Just in the world, listen and learn English - learning spelling can be so easy! On this page you're setting up what words to test students on. The next page - after you hit the Online Spelling Test button - allows children to take a spelling test and check their performance. This free spelling site acts as an online computer program in which you can create your own spelling lists, and word games with your own words. All games and other educational interactive activities on this site are absolutely free! You can also use this site to learn how to pronounce English words. Each word is pronounced slowly and clearly, emphasizing and emphasizing every syllable and consonant. This makes it great for ESL students and special education students as well, helping to discover new English words and their correct pronunciation. Spelling Games and Action Online Spelling Test is a simple test in which you hear words from the list randomly and insert them inside the text boxes. Do your best to spell them properly. At the end you Click Check to see how well you've done. If you make a mistake, you can click the wrong word to see its correct form. You can also ask to repeat the test only with erroneous words. Practice Your Words This online practice will be you step by step until you know how to write each word correctly just by hearing it. It consists of three stages: in the first stage, the letters for the vet are illuminated on the keyboard. In the second stage the word will still be presented and you copy it. In the third stage, you will only print it with a hearing. Reading with spaceships and reading with balloons is two similar games, one in more action themed and the other calmer. They practice reading words and comparing them to the words you hear. This easy reading activity is best for children in 1st grade and 2nd grade. Shark Spelling is an Action online spelling game. With the right type of words that you hear, you can eliminate sharks that threaten the goldfish. The input is under pressure of time, but you can press the key button to make the word flash on the screen. This activity can be challenging, and more suitable for children in 3rd grade and 4th grade. Hangman is a classic executioner game using his own words. It is unique in that you can hear hidden words. Word Search Puzzle Immediately create a complex puzzle of searching for words online from your own list of words. After every word you find, you will hear it being pronounced. Puzzles are dynamically created, and can sometimes be challenging even for children in 5th grade and 6th grade. Spell Lists are arranged in stages that coordinate children's development through spelling patterns, also called functions. Initial lists of first-graders allow children to approach words one word at a time (i.e. the original consonants) to then build more vocabulary of words (i.e. family words). Moving on from there, students in the second grade can piece some words and handle them more freely when they read (i.e. consonant mixes). Third-graders continue to read freely, spelling out the meanings of words (i.e. silent consonants), while fourth-graders can handle more complex spelling patterns (i.e. double-digits with electronic drop). Of course, a student may intersect in stages, for example, a second-grader may still need some work on a few first-class features, or may dabble in some third-grade functions. They are only an average snapshot for students in elementary school. In addition to lists for each level of class, there are many thematic lists for students of all ages to enjoy (themes such as September, Halloween, Winter, Earth Day, Science Day, etc.) Spelling and word learning ultimately contributes to increasing interest in reading and writing. When a child has an understanding of words and knowledge of vocabulary, all aspects of language art are amplified. Instructions What English words would you like to learn? Bring them into empty spaces Once you do, you can press the Listen button to hear the word you type. Score. there is more than one way to pronounce the word - for example, reading sounds different in the past: I read this book yesterday as it sounds in the future: I will read this book tomorrow. In this case you can press the Alternative button to switch between different pronunciations and choose the right one. You can also choose from a list of words that we have already prepared in the drop-off menu. When you're done adding words, select action from one of the green buttons. The spelling list will appear for students. They should read it carefully and, when it is ready, start activities. Once completed, students will have the opportunity to restart activities or go out to the main menu. In most cases, they will also get the opportunity to repeat the activity of the only words they have had problems with. Do you have a word you would like to add to those that have already been recorded? Leave a comment below and we'll be happy to work on it! We would also like to hear any other comments you have. As your children learn writing and spelling, they are likely to come home with lists of spelling words. It's their job to study and study words, but just looking at them won't always do the trick - they'll probably need a few tools to help them memorize words. Here are 18 creative and interactive ways to practice spelling words. They are also known as Kuti Catchers. It's easy enough to create the spelling word Cootie Catchers, and having your child spell word out loud is very useful for auditory learners. These modified fly-swatters can be a lot of fun to use. Give your child a copy of her spelling words and you may be surprised to see how she enthusiastically to start swatting words in all the books, magazines, posters and newspapers in the house. Just as speaking words out loud can help an auditory learner, literally building words can be useful for more visual learners. Just keep in mind you may need more than one set of magnetic letters to spell all the words. Fortunately there are free online tools like Discovery Education Puzzle Programs to help you make puzzles. All you have to do is put it on the word list. Some children learn better when all their feelings are involved. Doing things like spraying shaving cream on a table and letting your child trace words in it or having him write words with an insert in the mud can help cement words in his memory. There are several ways to do this. You can make two sets of flash cards with spelling words - it's a good idea to write each set in a different color, or you can make one set with words and one with definition. After that, he played just like any other game. This is a variation on old write your words ten times homework. Your child can trace each word over and over again to remember the order of the letters Every word. In the end, however, it is much prettier than a simple list of words. This way of practicing spelling words depends, of course, on whether your child has a mobile phone and what the plan includes. With unlimited text messages, it's easy enough for you to get text, correct spelling if necessary, and send back emojis. Although it requires a bit of preparatory work, it's a fun way to practice words. If you have a set of sandpaper letter stencils, your child can arrange every word, place a sheet of paper over it, and do the friction with pencil or pencils. This is also an activity that is quite simple with online resources. SpellingCity.com a fantastic website that lets you do word search and create other activities for your child. Hangman is a great go-to game when it comes to spelling words. If your child uses a copy of the spelling list, it will be easier to narrow down what word you use. Remember that you can always use definition as a key! This may sound silly, but there is a certain connection between music and literacy. If you and your child are creative, you can create your own silly melody. For a less musically inclined, try setting the words to the tune of Twinkle, Twinkle Little Star or other children's rhyme songs. This game is a fun way to interact with your child. One of you starts spelling a word on paper by writing one letter. The next one adds the following letter. Since many word lists include words that start with the same sounds, it can be hard to know which word your play partner started writing. Many teachers ask students to do this with their spelling words for homework, but you can add a twist by giving your child a theme to write or tell a story about. Give your child a marker and a bunch of newspapers and time it to see how long it takes to find and highlight all the words on the list. A little different from Hangman and similar to the Add-A-Letter game, this game is played by writing or typing words, but leaving an empty space or two for key letters. Your child will have to put in the right letters. This works especially well in practice vowel sounds. In fact, it's a charade game with your child's spelling words. You can do this in several ways- give your child a list of words and her guess which one you are acting on or put all the words in a bowl, and her choose one and act it out. While alphabetizing the list doesn't necessarily help your child learn to write each single word, it will help them recognize words. For some children, simply moving lanes (on which word written) around can help them keep the word in their visual memory. Memory.
