I did this a long time ago when I needed a booth to hold up the Ocarina Tabs that I had printed out. It's pretty effective. One of my friends gave me a stand and I decided to mode it a bit so he could keep himself. I tilted the bottom pieces and glued a thin piece of cardboard to the bottom to help keep things going. Then I just glued the bottom 2 things to a pair of wooden blocks. I'm sorry if you came here looking for a homemade booth that you could do as well. Trust me, I tried to make one and it never came out straight until I got this piece. So if for any reason you want to turn a note booth app into an almost portable music booth, I hope it helps. Dynamic signs are musical signs used to indicate how much note or phrase should be performed on. Dynamic signs dictate volume (volume or softness), but also a change in volume over time (gradually louder or gradually softer). For example, volume can change slowly or dramatically, at different speeds. Dynamic signs can be found on music sheets for any instruments. Instruments as different as cello, piano, French horn and xylophone can all play notes in different volumes and thus are subject to dynamic signs. There are no records to confirm who the first composer used or invented dynamic signs, but Giovanni Gabrieli was one of the first users of musical notations. Gabrieli was a Venetian composer during the Renaissance and in the early stages of the Baroque era. During the romantic period, composers began to use dynamic signs more and increase their diversity. The table below lists widely used dynamic signs.
