Open Navigation Book Documentary Shows Learn Media Shop O Bill Nye is biting off the doze because it's an episode of the earthquake. An earthquake is a sudden remeath of the Earth's surface and earthquakes happen all the time. It is estimated that there are 500,000 perceptual earthquakes in the world each year. 100,000 can be felt, only 100 of them cause damage. Earthquakes happen when pieces of soil in the Earth's crust tear together. The Earth's crust is made of large slabs of earth called plates that constantly move little. The plates jump with each other, but sometimes they don't move smoothly. An earthquake occurs when the plates suddenly come off and slip past each other. Most earthquakes occur along the boundaries of plates, such as the border between the Pacific Plate and the North American plate. One of the most active boundary panels for earthquakes is the massive Pacific Plate, commonly referred to as the Pacific Ring of Fire. The fire originates from volcanoes that form near the edge of the plates. Earthquakes can cause damage to cities, avalanches, tsunamis (a sea wave caused by an underwater earthquake or already an avalanche that disperses ocean water) and even alter the course of the river. The Earthquake episode is really going to shock you. Great ideas Earth surface is made of different plates. Earthquakes happen when energy stored in plates is released at once. The earth's surface can be altered by earthquakes. Did you know that? Scientists are using seismotters to record fluctuations caused by earthquakes? When earthquakes hit underwater, can they form huge waves called tsunamis? In 1964, an earthquake struck Prince William Sound in Alaska? It was so powerful that people across the ocean in Hawaii felt shaky. Books of science! Sprinkle Peter Murray. Published by The World of Children, 1996. Earthquakes Franklyn M. Branley.
