It has all the interesting features under the hood, like real-time speech to text, smart gestures, swipe action, and a few language support. A little-known feature that not many people know about is a clipboard. The clipboard is a simple addition to the Gboard, making it easier to clip links and texts without using any third-party software. Using Clipboard on Gboard is simple, just click the G button in the top left and click on Clipboard. You can insert copied content here directly. Gboard is recommended for those who use Gboard and don't want to include a third-party app. Set Gboard (free) 2. Clip Stack Clip Stack Stack is an open source buffer manager that doubles as a GTD (results- app). It stores and memorizes all your abbreviations and copied text even when you reboot your Android phone. Aside from storing clips, it allows users to share and star clips, as well as combine two clippings into one. Read: Best Clipboard Managers for Windows To Access These Clips, Swipe Down the Notification Center. There you can switch the last 5 texts right in the notification area. The notification will only appear when you copy a new text, and you can reject it with a napkin or even turn it off with a long press. If you are looking for a no-frills, simple and free clipboard manager, then Clip Stack will be a good choice for you. Installing clip stack (free) 3. Clipper - Clipboard Manager Clipper Clipboard Manager is one of the most downloaded and reviewed clipboard apps on the list. It comes with shopping in the app - Clipper Plus. The free version will allow you to store up to 20 clips and as you copy more clips, the old ones will be removed automatically. The free version also serves ads at the bottom, which can be a bit annoying. The premium or plus version allows you to store unlimited clippings without ad service and syncs your data online. There is also a built-in search function. The application is very stable. But, it offers little value compared to some of the other apps that we've covered here. Swipe down from the notification area. You should use this app if you need a stable and easy-to-use app. Set Clipper 4. Copy bubble If there is an app that I install as soon as I get a new phone, it will copy Bubble. But what is it? It's a simple app that lets you copy text into a clipboard that's always available at the touch of a finger. It has the smallest user interface, interface, it's a bubble floating around on the home screen. Don't worry, it's not intrusive and you can drag and put it anywhere you like. As it works, it adds texts, images and URLs you copy directly to the bubble from where you can access the text, edit it, share it with others or just delete it. It stores all copied items in dated order, so you can find the latter at the top. So the next time you read a quote or article you want to store, just copy it and it will go directly to the bubble. In terms of the user interface, you can change the size of the bubble as well as solve its transparency. You can also hide if not used. There is also a deletion and copying option that will come in handy when dealing with a lot of text and stored URLs. Get a copy of the bubble here. 5. Free Multi Clipboard Manager One of the more trusted Android clip managers, it offers a variety of useful features such as managing and arranging notes and clips, detecting and reading OTP messages, multiple sync devices, and more. This will allow you to create unlimited categories with an unlimited number of notes and the size of the text. The main selling point for the app is synchronizing multiple devices and backing up the clouds. If you want to copy and paste URLs and other text from one device to another, this will easily solve the problem. The app is also colorful and aesthetically pleasing. Access to clipboards: Swipe down from the notification area Use it if you want cloud backup and synchronization, and want your clips on different devices. Install Multi Clipboard Manager (free) 6.
