September 22, 2020 Version 2.74.0 - Pokemon TCG: The Champion's Way extension is available in the game starting September 25. - Error patch patch notes available on . This game has a great progression system with standard starter decks given to you at the beginning of the game. You're slowly getting harder AI as you play longer and it really shines for veteran players. I feel that if you are new to the TCG scene I wouldn't recommend this app unless you have a friend who is really good at Pokemon or just trading card games in general. The only reason why I don't give this 5's is the interface on the home screen isn't exactly handy in that they don't educate you about what the button does that. There is also no redemption option for card packages on this game app. You should literally go on your computer or be taken on a safari website to redeem the deck Cards. After all, if you are a die-hard fan and knowledgeable in the Pokemon game it gives you a lot of reward systems to be able to purchase more cards. Once you get on that grind train reaching awards it feels so satisfying buying packages. After buying packages, there are several modes of play that allow you to thrive as a player. Personally I'm not really good at deck building, but that's okay with Pokemon TCG provides you with tools so that you can focus on the game rather than the frustration of the deck building. I particularly like the themed deck game mode that is what sold me out. I love playing Pokemon TCG. It's a game with a lot of thoughtful strategy and balanced in a way that for the most part, a smart game can help you get back from behind, and can also even come from new players with veterans, so there's no terrible barrier to entry. The app is also completely free to play and offers many variations so you can endlessly play. But I started to get really annoyed with this game in the last 6 months or so. They released two new decks, the Mach Strikes and the Imperial Command deck. These decks are so overpowered compared to all decks released. It is very easy to do essentially one hit to kill damage for three if not two turns. Sometimes you can go back to win if you are really lucky and if you literally play your cards right. But good luck getting to this point because half the people I play using this deck just grind. They leave immediately if something starts to go south, and it drives me to the wall. I love playing a game that goes on a solid 10 minutes and provides a good challenge between two equally matched players and it's become so small and far apart because everyone just uses the same two decks because they're the best and nobody really wants the challenge. I would like Pokemon to change these decks or get rid of them completely because they ruined the fun and balance of the game. My daughter grew up loving Pokemon and we even bought her a few cards back when it came out. She never played, but she still loved getting cards. She and I have both been playing Pokemon Go for a few years now and she and her fiance were recently invited by friends to try the real thing. They love it so much that they got on this Pokemon TCG app to sharpen their skills and familiarize themselves with the different maps and strategies out there. Because of their enthusiasm here I am a 46-year-old mom now addicted to this app. It's fun and I love learning how some cards play together or against each other. I think it's brilliant for people who may have trouble interpreting some of the rules on the cards because it It's for you that will help you learn the right way to play. Great for people who love strategic games. It's like the most hilarious most complex rock, paper, scissors you'll ever play. When I search the ptco on the play store it says that my phone is not compatible, but if I download the APK from the mirror it installs and works without any problems. I'm curious with which phones it's compatible with, so I can use the fake moder device to be able to download it from the playback store and with its automatic updates from that. A what.
