From all the different teak oil formulas for sale out there, you will find that it gives the best long-term color to your precious teak wood furniture. What's in Starbrite premium oil? That's actually a good question. Don't be fooled by the name of teak oil. It's a marketing term. doesn't mean that the oil comes from the teak tree. Most teak oils consist of the base of flaxseed oil mixed with mineral alcohols and other additives. I suspect this is the case with Starbrite Premium Tick Oil as well. The manufacturer is just simple Ingredients like premium natural oils that are ultra-refined and modified and mixed with high-tech additives, so the truth will be said that can mean almost anything. The good news is that the formula they came up with works well, and is actually one of the few teak oils I recommend using. (Although for my own projects I still prefer to use a sealant tick). Starbrite Teak Oil PerformanceWhile most tea oils have significantly disappeared after two months of exposure to wind, rain and sun you will find that Starbrite holds up very well and still maintains a golden honey tone glow. Like all oils, however, it won't last forever and you still want to reapply every six months or so. The color is really fantastic when this teak oil is first applied to a tree, even a faded teak that has taken a beating from the weather. Take a look at the before and after picture below to see how some Starbrite teak oil can turn old, gray, neglected tick dining table: How to use Starbrite Teak Oil To get the best results, you should clean and decorate the teak furniture before the oil. Cleaning UpIf you take a bottle of Starbrite in one step Teak Cleaner and Brightener you can save time by combining the process of cleaning and lightening wood. Make sure you wear gloves for protection and follow the instructions on the bottle. If your wood is poorly weathered or very dirty, apply the cleaner directly on the dry wood. Spread it around with a scrub brush and then give it a few minutes to work. Scrub again and rinse clean. SandingFor are really bad spots or very aged teak, you want to sand them to expose fresh wood. Light resurfacing with 120-sand paper can also help prepare the surface to take over the teak oil. Be sure to completely wipe off all the dust after grinding. Oil oil teak oil sponge or brush in the direction of wood grain. You don't need to use a ton of it-just to use enough to thoroughly cover the tree. Then you want to wait about 10 minutes and destroy the excess. This step is extremely important! Use a clean cloth to completely wipe the excess oil from the surface of the tree. The inability to do this is what leads to most of the problems people have with tick oil. After that, let it dry completely (usually 24 hours) and see if you need to make another layer. Sometimes one coat is all you need, but 2 coats often give the best color. Here's a short demo of the application process: If you don't mind breaking down cleaning and lightening into two stages, then you'll find that Starbrite's Premium Teak Care Kit is a good value. Otherwise, you can buy a combined net/ and teak oil separately. Safety WarningBe warned that this product can cause greasy rags to spontaneously burn up if you throw them right in the bin. To be safe, you have to soak any oily rags in water water before utilitying them. The Star Brite Premium Golden Teak Oil is the best sealant/conservator/finish for sea teak and other lovely forests. suppliers in the heart of the best solid forest in the world - Burma. We buy special oil that is extracted from Burma tungsten trees under our strict control methods. First, the base oil is tested for the beta factor (the wrong beta factor makes the oil darken and rancid), and if not correct, the shipment is rejected. After passing our beta standard, we process this unique oil with heat and pressure to change its molecular structure. By changing the molecular structure, we can strengthen the oil, allowing it to dry faster and better to juice when applied on the surface of the teak wood. Next, we add special polymers to further strengthen the oil, longer UV protection. When using Star brite Teak oil, it leaves the tick fed and protected by the best available oil. Our special oil reveals the natural patina and grain structure of the teak tree. You can almost see a wooden smile when treated to a brite star. Competitive products are very inconsistent. Some are very thick and never leaving the tree sticky. Then the surface collects dirt, making the wood dark and dark. Other tick products turn dark over time, indicating that they have the wrong beta factor and are turning bad. Oils with the wrong beta factor will actually damage the appearance of your tick. Yet other competitive products are formulated with cheap flaxseed oil to cut costs. They are thin and watery, offering little protection and are not natural for teak wood. In an independent test conducted by the National Maritime Journal, Star brite Teak Oil was selected as the Best Choice of 10 competitive products. The article reads: Hands down the winner was Star Brite.... After two months, it showed no signs of weathering and kept its warm color . If your tick is prone to extremely harsh tropical conditions, you may want to consider using our special tropical teak oil/sealer. Tropical Teak Oil/Sealer uses our premium oil as a base, but has added polymers and UV protection to provide much longer protection under extreme outdoor conditions.
