Specialists in Neurological Disorders, Spinal and Spinal SurgeryTumors and ClinicsEducation PhD - Johns Hopkins University Faculty of Medicine Scholarship - Johns Hopkins Hospital and Health System Specialization - Johns Hopkins Hospital and Health System BoardNeurological Surgery - American Neurological Surgery Board, 2010 Surgeons receive the following rating based on our definitions, analysis of cases we use/review from five-year hospital records (see also Advice & Explanations): ☆☆☆☆ Five stars, using our analysis methods, show that a surgeon meets two criteria (1) based on the surgeon's results and number of cases, we can be at least 95 percent sure that better-than-average results are not just the result of good luck; and (2) the surgeon's outcome ratios were among the top 1/5 of the surgeons examined. ☆☆☆ Four stars, using our analysis methods, show that while the surgeon did not meet our criteria to qualify for a 5-star rating, the surgeon performed better than average and, based on the surgeon's results and number of cases, at least 90 percent could be sure that his better-than-average results were not just the result of good luck. ☆☆☆ Three-and-a-half stars, using our analysis methods, show that the surgeon's outcome ratios were among the top 1/5 of all surgeons studied, but there were not enough cases where we could be sure that at least 90 percent of the surgeon's better-than-average results were not just the result of good luck. ☆☆☆ Three stars (1) shows that the rates of surgeons are not among the top 1/5 of the surgeons studied, and (2) nor can we be 95 percent sure, the surgeon had worse-than-average results that were not just the result of bad luck. ☆☆ Two stars, using our analysis methods, state that the surgeon did not meet our criteria for a 1 star rating, that the surgeon's results were worse than average, and that based on the surgeon's results and number of cases, we can be at least 95 percent sure that the worse-than-average results are due only to bad luck. ☆ A star, using our analysis methods, a surgeon can be sure that two criteria (1) according to the surgeon's results and the number of cases, we were at least 95 percent of his/her poor-average results were not just the result of bad luck; and (2) the calculated surgeon's outcome ratios were among the worst 1/5 of the rates we calculated for all surgeons examined. — A line mark shows that this type of surgeries in the records that the surgeon was able to analyze to provide a basis for the report on the results is not enough.
