Download Photo: Shutterstock (Shutterstock) Whenever I have to make a download something great using my phone, or, indeed, download anything to my phone, I always weigh the question Will it burn through too much of my data plan? Against How much do I need this app (or game, or video) right now? While games and apps give you the ability to delay downloading until you're on Wi-Fi, rather than using your data plan to do the same for downloads started through a web browser is harder; Usually they will shoot from the minute you click on the link. Or they will, if you activate new settings in Chrome Android lets you delay them, too. You can play with this setup right now. You can find it in any Chrome beta or a slightly less stable Chrome Canary. Start by downloading any browser to an Android device. Once you've done this, type in the following URL in the Chrome address strip: chrome://flags/#download-later If it's too much to type, you can also just go with chrome://flags and search for word to download. However you will get there, you will need to find and turn on this flag: Screenshot: David Murphy Restart your browser. Now that you're downloading a file to Chrome (to store your phone), you should see a hint that asks you if you want to download the file now, start downloading it automatically as soon as you're connected to the Wi-Fi network, or schedule a download for a specific date and time in the future. In a report from Techdows, the feature is a bit fussy right now, they report that they've only been able to make it work once. If you don't want to fuss with this setup or can't make it work, there are a number of apps that you can use to replicate this functionality, including Advanced Download Manager and IDM. Your choice!
