First, it is a televised conversation defined by the Museum of Broadcasting Communications as an unwritten conversation aimed at the audience. Talk shows are shows organized mainly around conversations. So, for example, Entertainment Tonight will have a TV talk while the show will be talking. Television talk shows have been around since Dawn Wednesday, crossing, like many shows from its origins on the radio. Thus, the beginning of the golden age of talk shows can be considered in 1948, although television was not common in American homes until the 1950s. From 1949 to 1973, nearly half of all daytime programs on the three networks (ABC, CBS and NBC) had a conversation. In terms of talk show hosts, the video didn't kill the radio star- it made him even more of a star. Hosts in the golden age included Arthur Godfrey (Arthur Godfrey and his friends), Dave Garroway (The Today Show) and Jack Paar. All of them were an integral part of the formation of talk show formats that we know and love today. Because, unlike a catchy headline, talking is cheap. A talk show can cost less than $100,000 per episode to produce while many of today's dramas cost more than $1 million an episode. Thus, if successful, it can produce abundant profits. However, it takes a lot of work. Since 1948, hundreds of talk shows have come and go, and few of them have true stamina. Conan O'Brien, for example, managed to hang only because the network didn't know what else to put in its place. There are several types of talk shows, from outlandish programs like Comedy Central to the now defunct Graham Norton Effect to the more traditional. But while styles can vary, the format is limited. What we are most used to is the unofficial guest-host format, in which the show's host greets celebrities or other people worthy of conversation in what is perceived as an informal discussion. Wrapped around these segments are comedy or music segments or both. The second most common format is a public relations show in which the presenter (or presenter) is spraying people in the news or experts in the field. Shows what to follow The formats include both morning news programs (Good Morning America or Meet the Press) and issue talk shows (The Oprah Winfrey Show or The Jerry Springer Show). The show), the other is, in fact, a hybrid of the two formats. Probably because they were once considered the television equivalent of Kleenex- once used, just throw it away. Believe it or not, the first ten years of Johnny Carson's Tonight Shows were erased by NBC because the network couldn't imagine any reason to keep them. History has changed this perception, as hosts have become more influential, their shows more relevant, and the discussions generated are sometimes newsworthy. Arnold Schwarzenegger, for example, announced his intention to run for governor of California on The Tonight Show. And news programs often present 1,000 talk show hosts' comments about current events - not only to entertain, but also to share prevailing ideas about everyday women and men. Not strictly speaking, but the Museum of Broadcasting Communications Bernard M. Timberg notes two guiding principles of all successful talk shows: The host of everything: the host retains a high degree of control over their show, from the subject of comedy tone. They are also a brand and must bear this burden. The host can attract and alienate guests, negotiate on the look for his program and, in many cases, name a successor when they retire. Right here right now: The second rule is that a talk show should be experienced in the present tense, whether it's broadcast live or taped in front of an audience earlier in the day. They should feel fresh as if they are happening at the moment, even if the show is a 10-year-old replay. Apple introduced the Apple TV, a streaming service full of original shows, movies and documentaries. It will be Netflix without a filler, with Apple going all-with original content you'll only be able to watch through Apple TV. Streaming services switch to original content When streaming services first took off, they were filled with old shows that people wanted to watch again. However, now, with Netflix and Amazon leading the way, streaming services are packed with original shows you can't see anywhere else. The idea is to make a subscription to Netflix, Amazon Prime, or Hulu essential rather than a luxury. And Netflix in particular has spent a small fortune on original content in hopes of retaining existing customers and luring new subscribers. And now Apple is joining the party. Apple TVs Bags Host Celebrity Apple pitching Apple TV as the new home for the world's most creative storytellers. Once launched, the service will include a plethora of exclusive original shows, films and documentaries. And the cast of actors and directors is impressive. Oprah Winfrey, Steven Spielberg, Jennifer Aniston, Reese Witherspoon, J.J. Abrams, Jason Momoa and M. Night Shyamalan, are among the big names who have signed up for stardom, or produce original content for Apple TV. Details of the content are subtle on earth in this this but Spielberg will reboot Amazing Stories and Aniston and Witherspoon will star in a drama called The Morning Show. Apple is rumored to be spending billions on this original content. Apple TV is due to launch in the fall. It will be available in 100 countries, will be completely ad-free, and offer downloads for offline viewing. You can access Apple TV through the new Apple TV app on iOS, macOS, smart TVs and streaming devices. Apple TV channels steal the idea of Amazon One thing Apple does not disclose is the price of the Apple TV. It is possible that the company is still working out how much it has to charge to claw back the amount of money it invests. After all, Netflix continues to raise prices to pay for original content. Apple also revealed a new version of the Apple TV app, as well as Apple TV channels. The latter means you will be able to subscribe to premium services such as HBO and Showtime all in the app. In the same way you can use Amazon Prime Video Channels. Disney updates the content Warnings for its classic movies, when you play some movies at Disney, you will see a warning about the racist stereotypes depicted inside.
