Getting started: The subtlety of Rogue PvP talents, Azerite Traits, stats, damage and more! Note that this page covers the common Things Rogue PvP. For details of each specification, including talents, see Subtlety was the specification of PvP, the fight for raider capture, and Killing decent on both. They were all good for alignment. With the changes that have come over the last couple of extensions this is less true than before. Fighting is usually still better for raider captures, but not by much. Sub falls a little behind there due to a more complex rotation and is still more PvP/Burst oriented. Murder is just good at everything. And, depending on the patch changes, one or the other may well be better than Sub at any given moment. Spec Pros Cons Killing A Lot of Damage Good Blast Poison Energy Recovery while Promoting Bleeding Don't Forget to Keep Your Weapon Poisoned. Fight Great Steady DPS Adrenaline Rush Passive Energy Recovery Nothing Special From stealth Thinness Brutal broke out of Stealth and Shadow Dance Top - Stats - Tips for War Mode PvP Notes Used for you joined PvP or PvE server. The Battle of Azeroth changed the situation, and now there is a mode of war. All servers are now the same with regards to PvP, in that they are the default PvE. But now you can activate the world of PvP. Head to Stormwind or Orgrimmar, open the talent box, and click on (or turn off) the mode of war. With the war mode on you will receive 10% XP from quests and mobs, as well as get 10% of the respective World quest awards such as Gold or Azerite. PvP Talents are received at level 20, 40, 70, and 110, and they are all in addition to your regular talents. So you don't have separate pages of PvE and PvP. Although of course you can switch a few more... Your level is 20 PvP talent PvP bauble, others from the pool. All your later choices will come from this pool. You can read all about the war mode on Gamepedia. For more information on each specification, see these pages: Subtlety PvP - Outlaw PvP - Killing PvP For Your Equipment, see this post: How to get a 470 level item in the BFA 8.3 Video PvP Guide for Rogue Killing PvP Guide? Outlaw Rogue PvP Guide. An uncorrupted version of the Subtlety Rogue PvP Guide. Incorruptible version tips for sneaking and Striking 1 - Know how to re-steal If you can't re-steal in combat, you drastically reduce survivability. The main methods to achieve this goal are: blind, move away, and wait to leave the battle gouge/kidney shot of the enemy and run out to get your opponent maimed and sprint from disappear note: When fleeing (re-steal) it helps if you can break the line of sight with a convenient building or object. 2 - Don't blow all your energy if you sit on and spam your main hit, you won't have enough energy for a legitimate blast. For example, get 5 combo combos Wait for full energy, then KS (Kidney Shot) and you will be able to assume that you are killing, mutilate twice, then eviscerate / envenom. It's a more effective explosion than if you were in KS with 25 energy and maybe get 1 hamstring and some auto attacks in. 3 - Know the different styles of play and adapt you're not trying to beat a warrior the same way you beat the priest right? There are unique ways to handle each class. Normally though, the two main rogue styles can play burst and control. Explosion: When you do a lot of damage in a short period of time. This usually involves getting back into the stealth again several times to get the maximum damage possible. Management: When you use all the CC (Crowd Control) methods available to control the enemy and take them out of the game, so to speak. This means that you should always leave enough energy to poke out and be ready to hit the right magic school. Also, dazzling in juice can be a game breaker when it comes in terms of arenas. Defensive: A rogue who needs to be defensive will just try to avoid as much damage as possible. This will include steps like dodging, disappearing, blind, dismantling, poking out, and trying to re-stealth. As a warrior - if you have a pocket healer, then you will lie waste. Without it you will have to be somewhat careful about choice and choice. Otherwise, obviously the best PVP build depends on who's on your team, if you have one and who the other guy is.
