However, when you buy something through our retail links, we can earn an affiliate commission. Yes, we are well aware that Black Friday 2019 is technically only two weeks away. But a bunch of retailers have no respect for such restrictions as the actual day of an event, probably because last year's sales were so absurdly high. Black Friday, if one is to believe Best Buy and Walmart, has already begun. Both retailers (and a few others) have leaked their Black Friday 2019 ad pages and are already making some deals available. As you most of these deals are pretty bad. But after hours of scanning the available offers and cross-referencing with historical data, we have a lot of actually great deals for you to consider this year. We're confident there'll be more in the pipeline soon, but if you're looking for a new TV, a streaming stick, furniture or some plastic containers that are perfect for your meal prep ambitions, then these 4 retailers have you covered. Many of Best Buy's Black Friday 2019 Deals have already sold out OutBest Buy dropped its Black Friday ads last week, which is... Just... We're already tired. The company did this so early that some of the best deals have already sold out. Fortunately there are still a lot of really good ones available, especially on big ticket tech items. If you've been waiting to replace your TV, this might be the time. Vizio's M series TVs are really good, but usually a little more expensive than similar options from companies like TCL. That is not the case now. This TV has 90 local dimming zones, which gives it a really bright, contrasting image. It also has support for the Google Assistant and Alexa, as well as Chromecast and AirPlay 2. That means you're beaming slightly to the TV from your phone and then letting Alexa dim the lights. Walmart's Black Friday 2019 Ad Previews a Bunch of Deals to ComeMost of the deals listed in Walmart's Black Friday ad are not yet available. But we have scanned through its website to find the few gems that are. We'll let you know if more start to come online. Samsung's QLED TVs are probably overkill for most people. They offer incredible image quality, beautiful design and a fully functional smart interface. But they are expensive, almost never under $1,000. This deals season though, they are on sale for $700, putting them at the same price as a bunch of poorly built 4K TVs. If you're looking for the TV you never even consider leaving behind during a move, this is the one. OXO Kitchenware is for sale NowOXO doesn't offer huge deals on anything yet, but they do have a few things for sale. For now, this doesn't include some of our very favorite things (show me... a laptop cleaner!), but we expect a wider range of discounts to go live from them in the coming weeks. Weeks.
