Pur autre vie in real estate

In the property law of countries with a common law background, including the United States and some Canadian provinces, pur autre vie (Law French for another's life) is the duration of a proprietary free interest in the form of a kind of living property. [1] [2] While it's similar to the standard of living property pur sa vie (for your life), it's different that a person's life interest for another person's life, cestui que vie, will take his place. [1] [2] [3] For example, if Bob is given the use of the family home until his mother lives, he is in possession of the pur autre vie house. The pure estate life of autre vie can be created when the possible debris is lost, in the doctrine of the merger situation, where one person obtains another living estate and thus destroys the remainder is not currently transferred. [4] It can also arise when the tenant lives alienated his living estate to another, which is said to have been coined by the person to his estate the net living estate gains autre competition of the original living tenant. If a property is given for life B, A is a pur autre vie tenant and will keep the property in lifetime B (cestui que vie). If A dies before B, people entitled A or in his intestines will take an interest in the remainder of life B; If B dies before A, interest A then terminates. Interest is a kind of interest in freehold living and property, as one of which can be inherited; since 1925 it has been a fair interest only. From: pure estate (or per) autre vie.
