It takes the form of a series of lessons; according to the mother, the purpose of the lessons is to teach her daughter to behave and act properly. By the way, Jamaica Kincaid was indeed born to Elaine Cynthia Richardson on May 25, 1949 in St. Johns on our sister Caribbean island of Antigua and Barbuda. In 1973, she changed her name to Jamaica Kincaid because her family disagreed with her writing. Click here to watch my latest videos on my fun YouTube channel – you'll love it! Here is the full text of the poem: Wash the white clothes on Monday and put them on a stone pile; wash the colored clothes on Tuesday and put them on the clothesline to dry; do not walk without a head in the hot sun; boil pumpkin pancakes in very hot sweet oil; soak your little towels as soon as they are taken off; when buying cotton to make a nice nice blouse for a blouse, make sure it does not have chewing gum on it, because so it will not stick well after washing; dunk salt fish overnight before you cook, is it true that you sing benna in Sunday school?; always eat your food in such a way that it will not turn someone else's stomach, on Sundays try to walk like a lady, and not as a sl*t you are so striving to stand, do not sing benna in Sunday school, you must not talk to wharf-rat boys, nor give instructions, do not eat fruit on the street - flies will follow you; but I do not stare benna on Sundays at all and never in Sunday school; that is how to get sew a button, that's how to make a buttonhole for the button that you just sewed on, that's how the hem of the dress when you see the hem coming down and to prevent yourself from looking like the sl*t you're so striving to become, that's how you iron your father's khaki shirt so that it doesn't expire, that's how you iron your father's khaki pants so that they do not ravage; that's how you grow okra - away from the house because the okra tree harbors red ants when you're growing dasheen, make sure it gets a lot of water or else it makes your throat itch when you're eating it, that's how you're going to clean your whole house, that's how you water the yard, that's how you smile at someone you don't like too much that's how you set your table for tea, that's how you set the table for dinner, that's how you set the table for dinner, that's how you set the table for dinner with an important guest, that's how you set the table for lunch, that's how you set the table for breakfast, that's how you set the table for breakfast, that's how you set the table for breakfast, that's how you set the table for breakfast. table for breakfast, that's how to set the table for breakfast, that's how to set the table for breakfast in the presence of men who do not know you very well, and so immediately do not recognize the sl *t I warned you against standing, be sure to wash every day, even if it's with your own spit;don't swat down to play balls - you're not a boy, you know, don't collect people's flowers - you can catch something;don't throw stones at blackbirds because it doesn't have to be a black bird at all,that's how to make bread pudding;that's how to make a doukona;that's how to make a pepper pot; that's how to make a good remedy for cold; that is, how to make a good remedy to throw the child out before he becomes a child; this is how to catch a fish, that is how to throw back a fish you do not like, and so something bad will not fall on you; This is how to bully a person; That's how a person bullies you, that's how to love a man, and if it doesn't work, there are other ways, and if they don't feel too bad for giving up; that's how to spit it out into the air if you feel like it, and that's how to move fast so that it doesn't fall on you, that's how to make ends meet, always squeeze bread to make sure it's fresh, but what if the baker won't let me smell the bread?; Are you saying that after all this, you're going to be the kind of woman a baker won't let get close to bread?- Jamaican girl Kincaid. Autobiography, My Brother, Little Place and more, Critics have often compared her to Wall Sovnka, Drake Walcott, Toni Morrison and Naibel, who won the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1986, 1992, 1993 and 2001, Chenkaid's 1995 novel, My Mother's Autobiography, is her most accomplished work. The powerful wrath of her hero Sheila with an insidious narrative represents a historical nightmare and suffering the fate of incurable wounds caused to humans. Susan Sontag, one of America's most famous and influential critics and writers, once said: Of all contemporary English writers, I don't want to read. Only Chenkaid's work is what I've always wanted to read. Then I overcame what I didn't have as rudeness and contempt. It does not matter after transit, but when I first started young, it was extremely important to me, because I did not know what was going on ... If I don't write, I don't know what's going to happen to me, and writing becomes a form of self-bet. Chenkaid's self-lifesaving began when she left home for New York. He won't be left blind. She did not reply to her mother's letter or read her mother's letter. She lived alone in New York, worked as a nanny, went to night school, studied photography at New College New York for three years, and later won a full scholarship to another college to continue her studies, but left school after a year of study because she felt she was too old to be a student. She returned to New York to write and changed her name from Elaine Potter Richardson to Jamaica Kincaid (Jamaican Chencaid) to separate herself from her past and start her life again. She began writing for a youth magazine in New York, and her writing style was praised by William Shawn, senior editor at The New Yorker, who saw her discovery and recognition as a turning point in her life. Later in the interview, she said that it was Shawn who waved her around to know what her own voice was, what her own way of thinking and feeling was, and most importantly, and that it was those things that made up literature. She wrote for The New Yorker from 1976 to 1995. Be an excellent contributor to the Talk of The Town column. She later married Shawn's son, a musician, and had two children, and the family lived in Flemish, north of New York City. Her first novel, At the Bottom of the River, was published in 1983, followed by Anne John, My Brother, Lucy (1990) and My Mother's Autobiography (1996). She has won many writing awards and currently teaches writing at Burlington College and Harvard University. My mother's autobiography Anne John My Brother My Brother Lucy (1990) Reference
