In addition to being a diaper changing cart. O O behind Cool Wazoo, Ginelle Mills of Walnut Creek, California, launched her business at Shark Tank in November 2012. She entered the Tank in search of a $65,000 investment in exchange for 25% equity. QVC Queen Lori Greiner gave her exactly what she wanted. [Comfort & amp; Harmony cart cover is on sale on Amazon] Three years after the Shark Tank episode aired, Mills announced that cool Wazoo had been licensed to Comfort & amp; Harmony, which is selling the product under the Comfort & amp; Harmony brand for less than $20 at Babies R Us. It's also still available (purple with black finish) on the Cool Wazoo website for $49.99. [Related: 27 favorite shark tank products — New list] Cool Wazoo licensed. It has now sold Babies R Us under Comfort & amp; Harmony. THX S4 #sharktank, #abcsharktank, #mompreneurs, #beyondthetank @KidsII — Ginelle Mills (@ginellem) September 1, 2015 Cool Wazoo Before Shark swing in a park swing. She couldn't find a consumer product that would protect her daughter from the heat of the swing in the summer. Ginelle decided to make one at that moment. Would the Sharks see the value in this 4-in-one product called Cool Wazoo? Let's take a look. Cool Wazoo in Shark TankGinelle Evans joined shark tank and faced the Sharks in front of her. Ginelle introduced herself as the owner of Cool Wazoo, and asked the Sharks for $65,000 in exchange for 25% equity in her business. She showed the Sharks her diaper bag, which was filled to the brim with a lot of different products. To know how to start removing several things in the bag, including a high chair penthouse from the restaurant, a shopping cart cover, and a car shade, and a portable exchange pad that looked really small. Ginelle told the Sharks she couldn't even put diapers in the diaper bag. That's when Ginelle had a Eureka moment. She thought she could have all these products in one, and include her rocking idea. At that point, Ginelle introduced the Cool Wazoo. She said it contained material that redirected heat back to the swing, or whatever the heat source was. Ginelle also said that the cool Wazoo was 5 things in one. In addition to being the rocking cover, it was also the high chair of the restaurant cover the cover of the shopping cart, the exchange block, as well as a car shade. Kevin looked in confusion. Ginelle went on to say that she wanted a Shark that was aligned with her vision who wanted to make an investment. Kevin started writing, saying he didn't have any of it when he was five and survived somehow. Kevin wanted to know who was buying all this junk. Ginelle to show Kevin the packaging relieve confusion. When Ginelle handed the package to Kevin, Mark asked if they were other competitors. He said his wife uses some of the same products. Ginelle told him that his competitors were the companies that made the single-use product. She insisted, but no one else included 5 things and a product. Ginelle that when her daughter was burned was 80 degrees outside. Kevin interrupted her story, and asked her what she was doing while her daughter was getting burned Ginelle looks shocked and said she was simply swinging it on the swing she put on. Kevin seems surprised that the child was not screaming while she was burning. Ginelle told him that she only made small noises that Ginelle treated with exasperation. Your honesty made all the Sharks laugh. Ginelle told the Sharks that she had purchased a laser gun that tests the surface temperature of different objects. The Sharks wanted to know if she shot her daughter with him. Ginelle laughed and said she measured the temperature of the swing. Ginelle warned that she had a bit of luck in that her product was featured on The Today Show with Kathie Lee. The product was presented for about 40 seconds. Lori wants to know how cool it was how she was able to sell in those 40 seconds of air time. You know letting her know she didn't have any inventory. Ginelle Set down she had started production of Cool Wazoos, had her 40 seconds of Fame on The Today Show, but when she got her products back from the factory because the workers did not know how to create with this type of material. Lori seems shocked. Mark wanted to know if they returned the money when she returned the product, but Ginelle warned him that they didn't. Lori wants to know how many people had asked, and Ginelle told him that she didn't really know where to proceed from there. She didn't know how to capitalize on her sales. Ginelle said she had also been on a special Christmas episode of doctors, to see if she learned from her experience on the Today Show. Ginelle told the Sharks she was out of money. She explained that the show's producers wanted her to give 250 nice people to give to audience members. She said she had been able to do this, but that was essentially her entire inventory. Mark wanted to know that she received in return. Ginelle told him that she has nothing in return, and and in a change in the format of the show. Daymond told her it wasn't a good business decision. Kevin was sarcastically sympathetic, telling him that she caught whoever was screwed. He then jumped into his sales numbers wondering what they were. Ginelle told him she made $20,000 in the last 12 months. She insisted that this low number was due to her having no inventory at hand. She said she's not focusing on making too many sales because she's been moving her production overseas. She insisted that it was costing a lot of money to make her product in the United States. Mark wanted to know what the cost per unit to make a legal wazoo inn in America. Robert gasped dramatically. Ginelle said she was retailering each unit at $65.95. Robert wanted to know if she was doing any wholesale business. Ginelle said she was charging $32.50 from each wholesale unit. Mark wanted to know where she saw her cost go if she moved production abroad. Ginelle said she could lower the price to $11.36, not sacrificing quality. Daymond praised her on these shores, and asked if her husband was supporting her as she did this her full-time job. Kevin wanted to know how much she had lost in the business so far, and Ginelle told him they were almost $100,000. Kevin asked her how much more pain her husband could endure. Ginelle said a lot more, if she gave him beautiful smiles. Kevin asked if he could lose another $100,000. Ginelle ignored this, and said most people liked her product. She hasn't had one returned yet. Robert told her that she was on a wonderful journey. He said he liked that she was saving babies back, and that she had a wonderful husband. He told her it would be a long way. Robert said he wasn't sure if he wanted to join Ginelle on her expression, but failed. Mark told her she made great guys. Kevin said he thought his wonderful journey would end in tragedy with great men crying. He left while the other sharks laughed. Robert asked Daymond if he would join her on the trip. Daymond told her that she wasn't as seasoned as a businessman or CEO as someone he'd like to work with, He's out, Ginelle seemed little frantic. She told the remaining Sharks she had orders from a Canadian distributor wanted 2 to 3000 units to start. Ginelle said she received a purchase order for the first thousand. Lori said she thought ginelle was great, and then she'll find solutions to her problems. Laurie insisted that this product would not be the successful one, but that Ginelle would have a successful one, but the fact that it wasn't a business yet. Mark said he would need to have a return on the time he would spend to educate her about how to be a good businesswoman. He said the money was the easy part. He left, stating that she could not go through an ongoing learning process with her money. She seemed disappointed. she got the Sharks if they were all out, and when they didn't, she clearly fought back tears. She told them to be at Shark Tank a lot, ever since she put so much into it, and worked so hard. Ginelle said she understood that it looks like she just launched, but she's been putting our schedules in the last four years. She said it took her two years to design the product and source the material to make it work. Lori seemed to move 2. She told Ginelle, but she'd come back because she liked her so much. Lori said she'd give her her offer, which was $65,000 in exchange for 25% of the company. Lori continued, stating that she would have taken 50% of the company. Ginelle jumped up and down, and told Lori that she would accept the deal as she reached out to hug the Shark. Daymond told her that she was deadly since her smile worked her husband, and her tears. Lori. She thanked her and left the stage. Cool Wazoo is still available for purchase on Amazon Prime. In addition, they are currently licensed under the name Comfort & Representation & Repr
