They include recommendations on personal protective equipment, face-to-face and safe procedures that allows workers to organize their daily duties. In a press release, DoL said employers involved in construction should be vigilant to change the conditions of the outbreak, including those related to the virus and the availability of tests. The latest guidelines also address the following: Use physical barriers to isolate workers experiencing any symptoms of diseases, to keep them from spreading germs. Maintain the length and number of individual sessions at the lowest time, with only the necessary statistics. Reduce the total number of workers on the same work website through careful schedule and alternative workshops. These new guidelines aim to provide a safe, responsible and responsive approach for employers to resume work on projects while reducing the risk of the Corunavaros.
