Medina joined the world elite World Surf League Tour in 2011, and in his rookie year he finished in the top 12 of the ASP World Tour (now WSL) at the age of 17. In March 2014, he won the Gold Coast Kwicksilver Pro. Media sources call him the second person to perform the maneuver called Backflip. Medina also became the first person ever to land this step in the competition. Born in San Sebastian, Sao Paulo, and raised in the Maresias area, is the son of Simone Pinto Medina and Claudio de Jesus Ferreira. Medina started surfing at the age of 9; At the age of 11 he won his first national championship, Rip Curl Thunder Search in the Sub-12 category held in Boesio, Rio de Janeiro won many Brazilian amateur championships, becoming the champion at Volcom Sub-14, Kvicksilver King Thunder, Rip Curl Thunder Search, besides winning the state championship three times. In California he was second at the Volcom Internacional Sub-14, and in Ecuador, the vice-champion of the amateur world sub-16. At the age of 14 Medina was already in the final of the Paulista Championship, became the champion of Paulista among juniors, and surfing the World Qualifying Series (WS) 6-star tournament Onbongo Pro Surfing 2008 in Ubatube, where he managed to defeat his idol Adriano de Sousa, aka Mijerinho. In July 2009, Medina won a contract with Rip Curl and then tried to pursue a professional surfing career. Just 10 days later, Medina set a new mark as the youngest male winner of the Open Age pro competition, revealing maresias Surf International in Brazil at the age of 15 (this victory broke one of the oldest pro surfing records held by Australian Nick Wood, who won the 1987 Rip Curl Pro at Bells Beach as a 16-year-old). In 2011, there was a sequence of championships that took Medina to share the waves with the best surfers, surfing at W's 6 Star Prime in Imbitobe, and two WS 6 stars in France and Spain. He was also in the Pro Junior World Championship, which takes place in the French waves. With his prowess and results at such a young age, Medina signed and extended his contract with Rip Curle just the same week of his debut on the 2011 ASP Tour World Championships, at the age of 17, by a mid-season rotation. Medina finished the season with two wins in the WCT (Hossegaard, France and San Francisco, USA), despite the fact that he won only half of the season. In 2013, Medina won the World Junior Tour (ASP) in 2013, at the age of 19. In the 2014 WCT season, winning the first event of the season, the Kwicksilver Pro Gold Coast, Medina became the first Brazilian male surfer ever to win on the Gold Coast, and the first blunt to win this competition since 2004 and less than two months after recovering from a broken leg injury sustained while surfing in Hawaii. He dropped to 5th place in the rankings, finishing 13th in the Billabong Rio Pro, but again took the pole after winning the Volcom Fiji Pro. Later this year, finishing 2nd in the last event of the season at the Billabong Pipeline Masters in Hawaii, Medina became the first ever Brazilian ASP world champion at the age of 20 (the youngest since Kelly Slater did so at the age of 20 in 1992). In 2015, after a sequence of average results, Medina won the Kwicksilver Pro France, winning his sixth win in the WCT tournament and the second in Hossegaard, France. After beating Mick Fanning and reaching the final at the last WCT event of the season, Billabong Pipe Masters in Hawaii for the second year in a row, Medina made history again by becoming the first Brazilian ever to win the Hawaiian Triple Crown surfing title. With Adriano de Souza winning the other semi-final later and capturing the 2015 world title (due to Fanning's loss in Medina), the stage was set for the first time ever of an all-Brazilian final at the Masters trumpet. Medina finished second again as de Souza became the first Brazilian ever to win a Hawaiian CT event. With this second place Medina finished the 2015 WCT season on a high note, reaching 3rd place. On May 14, 2016, during the Oi Rio Pro, Medina made history again, becoming the first surfer to ever land a Backflip in a competition. As a result, Medina got a perfect 10 in all five judges, thus beating compatriot Alex Ribeiro in the 2nd round elimination heat. Medina finished third. On June 17, 2016, Medina won his seventh WCT tournament, the second in Cloudbreak, in tough conditions in the Fiji Islands. The victory put him as the most victorious Brazilian surfer in the history of CT only at the age of 22. In the 2017 season Made history as one of two (Carissa Moore, women's division) first-ever surfers to win a competition in the handles of the wave pool at Kelly Slater's Surf Ranch in Lemur, California. Medina later also managed to secure two more event wins (France Pro 29 and MEO Rip Curl Pro Portugal) achieving nine WCT wins in his career, by the age of 23. Despite reaching the final event with title chances, Medina finished the season in second place. With that Medina extends his end-of-season streak to at least the Top 3 to an incredible four years since his 2014 world title. In the 2018 season, Medina's better start than the previous three seasons and wins in Tahiti, and the pipeline (including a 10-point ride in his quarterfinal heat) lead him to become a two-time world champion, so becomes the most experienced surfer from Brazil, at the age of 24. 2018 was also marked as a historic year for Brazilian surfing, as the country won 9 victories - Medina (3x), Etalo Ferreira (3x), Filipe Toledo (2x) and William Cardoso - from 11 events in the calendar 2018 Championship Tour, which ended with the second title of Medina. In addition, CT surfer Jesse Mendes won the Vans Triple Crown surfing, becoming the second Brazilian surfer to accomplish the feat, next to Medina himself. Mateus Herdy became the WSL Junior world champion in Taiwan, joining Brazilians Medina, Adriano de Souza, Cayo Ibelli, Lucas Silveira and Pablo Paulino (2x), as well as the big waves of surfers Rodrigo Cox and Maya Gabeira, winning each other xtl. Wave awards and setting new Guinness World Records for the biggest waves. In the 2019 season, after another sleepy start, Medina again won another victory, his 13th CT tournament, this time in Jeffreys Bay, South Africa. Medina made history as part of the first-ever blunt-footers final at J-Bay, against compatriot Stolo Ferreira, and the first blunt-footed to win the event in 35 years (Mark Occhilupo) and the second ever. In September 9-15, Medina along with the best surfers from around the world competed in Miyazaki, Japan in the 2019 ISA World Surfing Games, a mandatory event to be eligible to participate in the 2020 Olympics, will also be held in Japan. Medina competed in the Men's Open and went on to finish the event with a bronze medal, followed by fellow CT surfers Koloe Endino (2nd) and compatriotTalo Ferreira (1st). In addition, due to these results combined with Filipe Toledo (9th after withdrawal due to back pain), as well as in the Women's Open Silvana Lima (2nd), Tatiana Weston-Webb (5th) and Mystery Hinkel (25th), Brazil won the gold medal, the first since the 2000 ISA Games. Less than a week later, Medina captured his 14th CT tournament victory, the third win at Rancho Surfing was Kelly Slater (thus winning all three individual competitions ever had on this site at the time), in the Freshwater Pro, climbing the rankings and reaching first position. Medina did not do well during the European leg and was eventually eliminated in the 1/8 final in the Quixilver Pro of France and meo Rip Curl Pro of Portugal. With one event left to go, he is second in the rankings, just behind Become of Ferreira. Medina sparked controversy at the 2019 Billabong Pipe Masters by doing what the surfing community known as Brazzo move and fell for its fellow competitor. This led to his actions being called unsportsmanlike. The Brazilian surfer is also chosen to represent his country at the 2020 Tokyo Olympics, along with WCT 2019 champion Italo Ferreira. The Olympic Games will be held from July 24 to August 9. Medina's surfboard has been working with his formative Johnny Kabianka since 2008. Johnny Kabianka, a Brazilian living in the Basque Country, is one of the world's most famous surfboard shapers. Medina uses about 100 surfboards a year. Cabianca, formerly formed under Spanish label Pukas, founded its own brand in 2015. Medina's first victory on the Cabianca surfboard was Kwicksilver Pro France 2015.
