It's a polite way of saying something that usually sounds harsh or unpleasant (i.e. instead of old people we talk to older people). Using euphemism, we can avoid crude or politically incorrect statements. Euphemism comes from the Greek phrase euph'mismos, meaning sounding good. Euphemism is widely used in various situations in everyday language. It can be used in both official and informal conversations. It is used at work, among friends, in news articles, etc. Sometimes it plays an entertaining role (when someone wants to sound funny and entertain their listeners), and sometimes helps to calm the situation, especially during disagreements and fights (we had no struggle, we just had creative disagreements). He's sometimes called a doppelganger. Euphemism is a word or phrase that pretends to communicate, but in fact it is not. This makes bad things seem good, negative situations look like positive, unnatural can look natural, unpleasant can become attractive, or at least tolerable. It is also a language that avoids or sometimes shifts responsibility. Also, political correctness is filled with euphemistic phrases. Types of euphemismS several kinds of euphemism. We can distinguish between them according to their purpose. To soften the expression This type of euphemism is used to soften the expression that will sound harsh. In other words, its role is to say the same thing, but in a more polite manner, as in the examples below: Preowned instead of usingDeceased instead of deadEuthanize instead of killPut sleeping instead of killCorrectional institution instead of prisonTo Be PoliteThese words or phrases are put instead of some others, because you do not want to say them in particular Company-like: Toilet instead of toiletPowder nose instead of using a toilet-ful-figure instead of being overweightMentally challenged instead of backwardVisually challenged instead of blindIn place of being ImpoliteEuphemism is sometimes used even to intentionally offend someone, mock someone's inability or simply make fun of someone: Bite dust instead of blindNess is probably more evpheistic. All expressions below euphemistic forms are sometimes used instead of the verb: race work well, definitely done dancing, in a better place without feeling pain, go west, gone, finished, at room temperature, get a one-way ticket, out of his/her suffering, cross the bar, sleep, join most, dust, blow bucket, live disturbances, resting in the world, check, pass, no longer with us, meet his/her creator, wear tag, give way to give way Ghost, blow the oxygen habit, pushing up the daisies, six feet under, with angels, terminated, call home, final curtain call, etc. The importance of euphemismEufemism is not only a way to escape the truth. Euphemism is widely used in various situations where its absence will make great discomfort, or even make reality even worse. It is difficult to explain to a small child that his or her pet has died. Children at a young age do not pay attention to death, and their mind can not yet process that what was alive now suddenly is not. It's even harder when it comes to family members. In politics, the use of euphemistic expressions is mandatory because it helps to calm the tense situation, especially during peace talks. If you say that one side has killed 10,000 soldiers of the opposing side, it will most likely make the situation tense and will not help the negotiations, but if you say that one side has 10,000 victims, it is somewhat less likely to create discomfort or fury. We should not forget its use in literature, without which we would not have such a wide range of euphemistic expressions. Whether you want to use it to create rhymes in poetry, or you just want to make your novel look richer and more interesting, euphemistic expressions are the tool you need.
